THE HOSPITALS YEAR-BOOK

1938

ISSUED UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE

JOINT COUNCIL OF THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN AND THE BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY

AND THE

BRITISH HOSPITALS ASSOCIATION
(Incorporated)

THE OPENING OF Stethos House IS THE CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT OF SIXTEEN YEARS DEVOTED SERVICE TO THE HOSPITALS AND PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN

The success which has made Stethos House possible is the justification of that policy of personal study of the practical problems of Surgeons, Superintendents, House Governors, Secretaries, Clerks and Stewards, Matrons and Medical Officers of Health, which J. H. Bounds has pursued with unremitting zeal.

A distinguished architect has shaped a spacious building to serve Stethos ideas and ideals. It possesses an area of some 20,000 square feet Two floors form the administrative departments, which include fitting rooms, reception room, two interviewing rooms and a display room—all served by an electric lift for the convenience of visitors. The other four floors are utilised for housing the immense stock necessary for carrying out the Stethos Service.

INVITATION.—Captain J. H. Bounds is always glad personally to interview visitors and freely to place his knowledge and experience at their disposal.

THE CALL OF PAIN

The call of pain is seldom stilled, and relief is of primary importance to the suffering patient. With Veganin there is no systemic disturbance, no habituation. It may therefore be safely entrusted to the patient as a dependable means of relieving and preventing pain.

"No Expense is Incurred until the Patient is Tested & Satisfied..."

OUR SERVICE TO DOCTORS AND THEIR DEAF PATIENTS!

WHEN a deaf aid becomes necessary for your patient—we place a specialised organisation at your disposal. Such are the varying degrees and forms of deafness that no one type of aid can possibly suit the particular needs of the many different cases—for this reason, our service includes the free testing of the patient by the "Ardente" AURAMETER—whereby the exact aural needs are determined and plotted by graph. Thus an aid VALVE TYPE, BONE CONDUCTION, ELECTRICAL OR NON-ELECTRICAL most suited to the patient's needs is assured—and no expense is incurred until the patient is satisfied—with HEARING.

Particulars gladly sent and Tests are made at Aurists, Doctors, patients, or any of our addresses. Commended by leading Medical Journals. Gold Medallist and Diploma Holder.

THE HOSPITAL YEAR.

REVIEW BY THE EDITOR.

Patients treated in the Voluntary Hospitals.

During the year 1936, 1,378,050 patients were treated in the wards of the Voluntary Hospitals and 6,261,497 in their Out-Patient Departments.

These figures represent increases over the previous year of 52,614 In-patients and 272,544 Out-Patients.

The number of their beds was increased by 2,772 to a total of 90,835.

Voluntary Hospital Finances.

The Finances of the Voluntary Hospitals for 1936 may be summarised thus :—

Received.	Spent.	Surplus.
£17,680,903	£17,167,378	£513,525

It is necessary to explain so far as available information allows what is meant by the surpluses with which the financial years of the Voluntary System of hospitals have ended for some time past. The figures are based upon the sums received from the general public and Public Authorities and the sums expended by the hospitals during the year, and do not take into account the amount of any debts or loans or the relationship of these to the amount of investments held which are not earmarked in respect of endowments. Owing to the varying ways in which hospitals keep their accounts no attempt has been made during these years to draw up a Balance Sheet of the hospitals as a whole. Indeed it is not possible for this to be done, as a large number of hospitals do not supply the necessary information. There is probably little improvement in this respect since the year 1924, at which time 411 hospitals outside London did not publish a Balance Sheet. The vital fact in connection with this matter is that the Voluntary Hospitals each year add to their accommodation an average of 1,500 or more beds. As the average cost of providing a hospital bed is £500 or more, this annual addition almost swallows up the annual surplus. Moreover, the maintenance of these 1,500 beds at (say) £3 a week represents an additional annual burden of £225,000.

Whether the Voluntary Hospitals spend their resources as wisely as they might; whether they could get better value for them or not, are matters of interest and importance to themselves and to the public. These two questions must be, however, regarded at present as sub judice. It is possible that, taken as a whole, and compared with other large activities, spending millions a year, they do not do so badly. What is certain, however, is that each year the surplus of the preceding year is utilised in meeting capital expenditure on extensions. It is necessary to keep this fact in mind when speaking of the financial position of the Voluntary Hospitals.

We are again indebted to Sir Charles Harris, G.B.E., K.C.B., Honorary Financial Consultant to the Central Bureau of Hospital Information, for the Financial Review which appears on page xlviii.

The Voluntary Hospitals Commission.

To-day, when so much that concerns man in his social aspect is under review, it may not be out of place to consider certain beliefs still held strongly by many concerning Voluntary Hospitals. Are they really sound, and how have they arisen? Modern hospital education began about 200 years ago when man was moved to collect money for the building of hospitals in which free treatment could be given to the sick poor. The public applauded the effort and put their hands in their pockets. The work attracted the cream of the medical profession. A local patriotism and a proprietary attitude towards hospitals and their work grew up. Vested interests were created. The work was found interesting and, as it was well done, good traditions were established. There was naturally jealousy of interference from outside. These are some of the factors in the formation of the Voluntary Hospital complex. In the course of 150 years or so, when hospitals had acquired a recognised position, they came to be regarded as a System, and emphasis was laid upon the word "Voluntary" which formed part of the title that is still to be seen over the entrance of many hospitals—"Supported by Voluntary Contributions." The word has largely obscured the picture, for the really important characteristics of the so-called Voluntary System are the absence of statutory control and of the desire to make any profit out of the treatment of the sick, not the sources of income.

There were, however, other features of the Voluntary System to which importance was, possibly unduly, attached, and which in the course of time came to be regarded as essentials of the Voluntary Hospital System. The doctor must on no account be paid for his work; no patient must make any payment for the treatment received; the State must on no account take any share in the work nor must it help financially. (This latter belief was naturally shared very heartily by the State itself and fostered by Chancellors of the Exchequer.) So long as the work of the Voluntary Hospitals—the outcome of a moral obligation upon those with money or medical skill to come to the aid of their less fortunate fellow creatures—was confined to those who had no money and who fell sick there was no harm in these beliefs. But so soon as their benefits began to be extended to those who were self-supporting a difficulty came into existence—a difficulty easy enough of solution had it been faced at the outset and had there been a modification in the attitude of mind of those responsible for the management of hospitals to meet the expansion of their work. There was no effective realisation of the fact that the moral relationship between the "haves" and the "have-nots" was one thing, and that between the "haves" and the wage-earning class was another. It was not until it was felt that something was wrong and that there was no obligation whatever on charity to provide free treatment for the wage-earning class that anything was done. Then a typical compromise was effected. It was believed to be fatal to the Voluntary System that a patient should pay for his treatment. There was, however, no objection to the collection of money on a mass basis from the wage-earning class, to be given as a free gift to the hospital. If it should chance that a member of the wage-earning class should fall ill, then the contributions which he had made during health might be regarded as an off-set against the cost of his treatment during his stay in hospital. Thus the face of the hospital was saved and the so-called principle that no charge should be made for treatment maintained. The mass payments established no contract between the hospital and the wage-earning class, but the refusal to admit a patient who was a suitable case for hospital treatment was the exception.

These collections have grown and are growing rapidly and are known as Contributory Schemes. Owing to the fact that they differ in method and that in some cases weekly payments are augmented with gifts and donations of a voluntary character, it is not possible to say exactly how much they raise annually. It is, however, a very large sum, of the order of several million pounds, and their potentialities may be placed somewhere in the neighbourhood of £8,000,000 a year. As generally happens with makeshifts, a new difficulty was brought into existence. The wage-earners of the country number with their dependants approximately 19,000,000 persons. To these, Contributory Schemes have offered opportunities that have been taken advantage of to a constantly increasing extent until the medical profession could no longer disguise from itself the fact that provision was being made for the institutional treatment of approximately half the population of the country on a basis that took no monetary account of the services of the doctor. It was unfortunately one of the accepted beliefs that an unpaid medical and surgical staff was an essential of the voluntary system. Somewhat inconsistently, when the medical profession began to be uneasy regarding the position, they were told that the Honorary Staff of a Voluntary Hospital got its reward from the higher fees they were able to charge their private patients. This difficulty still remains unsolved, smoothed over for the time being by compromise and palliatives almost as numerous as the hospitals themselves. In no sense whatever is an honorary staff an essential feature of a Voluntary System and the failure to appreciate this fact has obscured realities and prevented those adjustments that progress forces upon Voluntary Hospitals as well as upon all other human activities.

Again, vested interests have in the past kept apart the staffs of hospitals from the general medical practitioners (except in those hospitals that are staffed by general practitioners and which provide a special difficulty of their own which it is not necessary to consider here), to the detriment of any really comprehensive settlement of the question of the staffing of hospitals generally. They have also helped to accentuate that possibly natural jealousy of outside interference that has reacted more than anything else to the disadvantage of Voluntary Hospitals. They have been kept disastrously apart. Freedom from statutory control and from central dictation is one thing, and a failure to realise that there are common interests and common problems to solve is another. That which hospitals are now doing from pressure from outside could and would have been done spontaneously had there not been a worship of non-essentials and a reliance upon mere phrases.

Hospitals would have considered their problems in common and would have found they were members of a family which was itself part of a larger whole. They would have found that with the progress of science and the increasing demands for its application to health they could not carry the whole burden and would have to call in the State to help. Unfortunately, the catch-word that any approach to the State meant death to the Voluntary System blocked the way. Now at this late hour it is probable that if a vote were taken, the majority of hospitals would acknowledge that partnership with the State is desirable and that such a partnership would include finance. It is unfortunate that this was not realised years ago, when circumstances forced the State to make provision for those complaints which either appealed less to voluntary effort or were in themselves a danger to the community. Then would have been the time to come to some agreement in dividing off the sphere appropriate to voluntary effort from that which might be left to State responsibility. Machinery for the purpose of discussion and negotiation did not, however, exist, and matters drifted on up to the Local Government Act of 1929. By that time a National Hospital policy had developed, the outcome of an entirely natural desire to meet needs which had grown and which were not being met or completely met by voluntary effort.

It was thus in an atmosphere of difficulties that the Committee that goes by the name of the Sankey Commission was called into being. Problems were increasing in number and were assuming proportions far out of keeping with the inherent difficulty of solving them because of the absence of any machinery for their consideration and because too there was nothing stronger for voluntary effort to lean upon than the catch-word of the past and the beliefs which they had created. Difficulties of finance have bulked far too largely because of a desire to confine to voluntary shoulders burdens that were never intended for them and which they ought never to have been asked to bear. Even to-day time is wasted upon the discussion of financial subtleties. The State may pay for services rendered at a cost below that which it would have to pay if it undertook the work itself, but there must be no payment by the State of a capital nature. Thus the State may pay (inadequately) for such work as a Voluntary Hospital can do for it at less cost than it could do it for itself, but it must on no account make any grants to enable that work to be extended or improved. For less than the cost of a battleship, provision might be made forthwith for an efficient system of treating fractures, but those who are suffering now must wait until principles of finance have been discussed ad nauseam. No better example can be given of the difficulties that arise from what can only be described as a distorted way of looking at things than the Road Traffic Acts, by means of which the State avoids financial responsibility in connection with the traffic accidents on its roads. Why it should spend thousands of pounds upon police control and pay nothing at all towards the results of the failure of that control is difficult to explain. The State collects from motorists by taxation a vast sum of money, some of which goes to repair the roads but none of which is used to repair those who are injured on the roads. Other instances of a similar character could be given.

The Sankey Commission has been so far successful inasmuch as hospitals have agreed to the setting up of a provisional body to advise how the machinery recommended in this Report can be brought into existence. This body is now sitting and is engaged, with the help of the hospitals themselves, in the task of dividing the country into regions. The following are extracts from a letter which the Provisional Central Council has sent out to the Chairman and Secretary of every Voluntary Hospital in the country :—

> "The Provisional Central Council of The British Hospitals Association has been charged, inter alia, with the formation of a scheme by which the following three recommendations of the Voluntary Hospitals Commission might be brought into effect :—
> 1. The division of the country into Hospital Regions.
> 2. The formation in each region of a Voluntary Hospitals Regional Council to correlate hospital work and needs in the region.
> 3. The formation of a Voluntary Hospitals Central Council to co-ordinate the work of the Regional Councils.
> "This task will be much easier if the Provisional Central Council has the help and advice of the representatives of the Voluntary Hospitals themselves, grouped as they are, under the existing regional organisation of

The British Hospitals Association. Some of these groups may be too small; some too large; some not arranged to the greatest advantage, for the distribution and character of hospitals in the groups vary.

"The Council hopes that the question of the most effective grouping will be considered from an entirely fresh and unfettered point of view. It is advisable to base the extent of the Region upon the district served by a large key hospital. It is recognised that in certain areas where there is no such outstanding hospital some variation from the principle will be necessary, and it is obvious that in London the problem must be looked at with different considerations in mind.

"To secure the maximum advantage from all hospital services, easy and effective contact with the Local Authorities is essential. Experience has shown that, given good will, areas which coincide with the boundaries of one Public Authority find no difficulty in forming amicable and effective contact with Public Authorities outside that area. It seems, therefore, to be unnecessary to attempt the task of determining in all cases, the appropriate regions by reference to the boundaries of Local Authorities.

"It may well be necessary in fixing the limits of a region to take into consideration the Membership and Organisation of the contemplated Regional Councils. This, however, can probably best be done when the Provisional Council has drawn up a preliminary map and is in a position to consider the second term of its reference, namely the formation of Voluntary Hospitals Regional Councils to correlate work and needs in the region. In this task too, the Provisional Central Council will require help, and they suggest that each region should carefully study the composition and the function of the four Joint Hospitals Schemes which are now in operation and of which details will be found in Appendix II of the Report of the Voluntary Hospitals Commission, pages 69 to 76.

"In the difficult and important task entrusted to it, the Provisional Central Council asks for your active co-operation and help. It hopes that you will in due course be ready to send up to London one or two representatives of your area to discuss with it any points of difficulty that may arise.

"The Provisional Central Council realises that in so important a matter it must take time for the Regional Secretaries to gather the considered views of their members. It may be thought wise to set up a special body in each Region for the purpose of preparing a Report and it is understood that action on these lines is already being taken in certain regions. Such a Report will necessarily include consideration of revision of present regional boundaries. The Provisional Council hopes, however, that steps will be taken with as little delay as possible to set the machinery in motion for the preparation of the necessary Reports and thus give the Council the advantage of the intimate local knowledge and experience of those who are concerned in the effective working of hospital services.

"Members of the Provisional Central Council are prepared to attend meetings called to further the regional organisation proposed and to discuss the scheme in all its bearings.

"It appears to the Provisional Central Council that a Region should comprise :—

A. KEY HOSPITALS.

(i) A medical school; full provision for diagnosis and treatment; staff of consultants.

Or, if (i) is not available, then

(ii) As A (i) but without medical school; post graduate school if possible.

B. LOCAL HOSPITALS. Adequate provision for diagnosis and treatment; a consultant and/or general practitioner staff, but of limited selected number.

C. SMALL ('COTTAGE') LOCAL HOSPITALS. Provision for emergency diagnosis and treatment. Staffed by all local general practitioners. Visiting consultants from outside. Preferably not less than 20 beds. Not necessarily any resident medical staff; with an adequate number of trained nurses. Not a training school for nurses.

D. SPECIAL HOSPITALS OR DEPARTMENTS. Hospitals or Departments devoted to a particular class of disability.

E. AUXILIARY HOSPITALS OR HOMES. For pre-treatment or pre-operation cases; after-care and convalescence.

F. 'PAY-BEDS.' Beds for patients able to pay the whole or a substantial portion of the cost of treatment.

G. Out-Patient Clinics. Either on the premises of hospitals or in any event as convenient as possible for the collection and examination of patients; as near their homes as possible.

H. Fracture Clinics. Facilities for dealing with Fracture cases on modern lines.

I. The following services should be reasonably available for all patients in a region :—

Radiological
Deep X-Ray Therapy
Pathological
Radium
Physiotherapeutic
Massage
Dental

J. Adequate Ambulance or Transport Service.

K. Effective arrangements for co-operation between Local Authorities and Voluntary Hospitals.

"The Provisional Central Council would be grateful if Regions would consider these important matters and report to it as soon as possible and in any event let the Council know within three months what steps have been taken up to that time. Should any Region not include provision for hospital services as outlined above, it would be helpful to the Provisional Central Council if attention were called to any deficiencies in this respect."

Is it too much to hope that the Hospital System of the future, by whatever name it may be called, will be the resultant of forces pulling at no greater degree of divergence than is necessary to ensure a form of administration for it, that is neither too loose nor too rigid, and in which adequate control of finance is secured by some method as independent of politics as is the Judicature?

Hospital Assessment.

The history of the Assessment of the Voluntary Hospitals is sorry reading; still sorrier is the manner in which assessment is being carried out to-day. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Council of The British Hospitals Association has received the almost unanimous agreement of its members to the promotion of a Bill in Parliament that has for its object the exemption of Voluntary Hospitals from assessment. The story is shortly as follows.

Up to the year 1866 the Voluntary Hospitals were exempt from assessment. They were believed to be so exempt by the law of the land. The Courts discovered, however, that according to the strict letter of the law there was no such exemption. A few of the wiser hospitals obtained the sympathetic help of their local authorities, who inserted clauses in local Acts of Parliament authorising an exemption from assessment which they still enjoy. No doubt all the Voluntary Hospitals could have secured similar exemptions had they taken similar steps to make good this accidental hole in the law. Had they done so a sum difficult to calculate, but certainly amounting to several million pounds, would have been saved to voluntary effort: a costly penalty for putting off to the year 1938 that which ought to have been done some sixty or seventy years ago. At first the assessing authorities acted according to the spirit of the law and made purely nominal assessments. But as time went on leniency began to disappear and new methods of arriving at the rateable value were introduced. One of the most recent, called the contractor's basis, appears to be the favourite because of its simplicity and its productivity. In one county where it has been adopted hospitals are assessed at figures ranging up to £13 per patient bed. According, however, to a recent decision in the Courts this basis is not in accordance with law. The Lord Chief Justice in giving judgment said: "There is no magic in the rating of a hospital, voluntary or otherwise. The question is what a tenant may be expected to pay by the year, all relevant deductions being made." This judgment is quoted in The Times of the 18th December, 1937. Where such tenants are to be found and what rents they would be likely to pay must be left to the imagination. In this connection the term "hypothetical" as applied to a tenant would seem to be singularly appropriate.

The Bill, if successful, would put an end to an annoying seventy-year-old doubt; would remove to its appropriate region the problem of what a hypothetical tenant would pay for the privilege of carrying on the burden of a modern Voluntary Hospital; would make it unnecessary to ascertain who was in beneficial occupation of hospital premises; would put an end to the absurd capriciousness of present-day hospital assessment; would follow the sound precedents of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Halifax and other towns in which exemption from assessment has not, to any ascertainable degree, adversely affected private generosity, and would lay no heavier burden on the ratepayers of the country than an addition of approximately $\frac{1}{8}d.$ in the £ rate.

The view is held and not seldom expressed (upon what evidence is not stated—possibly reliance is placed upon some casual catchword from the days when patients were freely bled for their good) that a sympathetic attitude on the part of the Public Authorities towards the Voluntary Hospitals, if expressed in terms of money, would be bad for their health and eventually destroy them; would be one of those thin edges of wedges of which there are so many. If this view is the correct one, then those who hold it have every reason to be grateful to the Public Authorities for bettering their teaching, as the following figures show.

	per annum.
Contributions by Public Authorities to Voluntary Hospitals under clear and definite powers conferred by Acts of Parliament...	£50,000
Contributions by Voluntary Hospitals to Public Authorities under demands for rates, the legality of which is definitely challenged by eminent Counsel.	£200,000

The figure of £50,000 must not be confused with payments made by Local Authorities to Voluntary Hospitals for services rendered. Incidentally these services are obtained at a cost far below that which would have to be paid were advantage not taken of the facilities provided by the Voluntary Hospitals.

The situation is both exasperating and absurd, and ought to be cleared up. If the Bill does nothing more it will at least force an attitude towards the financial relationship between the Public Authorities and the Voluntary Hospitals that is based upon something understandable by the ordinary man. The hospitals are practically unanimous in their resentment. It is a shallow criticism that says that unanimity in favour of a Bill for relief from taxation is not surprising. The tax is not based upon reason, but upon a doubtful interpretation of a form of words: it is moreover capriciously imposed, and these two facts weigh with the hospitals much more than the mere amount, considerable as it is. What justification can be found for the granting of relief to an enterprise carried on for profit (under the Local Government Act, 1929) and its refusal to a Voluntary Hospital? Apparently trade is stimulated by that which destroys voluntary effort, or perhaps the fact that a Voluntary Hospital does not express its output in terms of £. s. d. accounts for this discrimination. There is sound commonsense in the following extract from the leading article of a Glasgow newspaper urging the derating of the Voluntary Hospitals :—

> "The amounts levied as local rates on voluntary hospitals are an insignificant moiety of the local community's revenue. That moiety annually expended on the equipment of the hospital is certain to increase the number of citizens restored to active citizenship. Better, surely, is a live ratepayer than sums compulsorily forfeit to the community's exchequer from funds voluntarily raised to heal the community's sick."

It is also worthy of note that the Committee on the Scottish Health Services reported in 1936 as follows :—

> "The claim of the Voluntary Hospitals to be granted remission of local rates and to be exempted from the payment of legacy and succession duties has frequently been advanced. We are aware of the arguments against this claim; but, in our view, the fact that in the event of failure of the Voluntary Hospitals to maintain their services, a heavy burden would fall on the State and local authorities, seems to us to provide a compelling reason for assistance of the Voluntary Hospitals in ways that would not interfere with the flow of voluntary contributions. All our recommendations regarding the Voluntary Hospitals are governed in part by this consideration of the financial interest of the State and the local authorities in the continuance of their service to the community. At present some Voluntary Hospitals are granted remission of local rates. We suggest that all Voluntary Hospitals should be relieved of local rates and be exempted also from the payment of legacy and succession duties."

Milk Supplies.

Some seven million gallons of milk are consumed each year in the Voluntary Hospitals of England and Wales. Milk is the most important article in their dietary and one for which there is no alternative. Any normal increase in its price must be accepted with equanimity and its effect minimised by such limitations to its use as are possible. When, however, it is deemed wise in the interests of a section of the community to raise prices abnormally and impose conditions that inflict hardship upon the sick, would any principle, economic or administrative, be violated by so simple and justifiable a readjustment, as a Treasury grant to meet the increase of £500,000 in the cost of milk to the voluntary hospitals that control has imposed upon them during the 4½ years the scheme has been in operation? There would be no difficulty in distributing such a grant equitably, and common sense might for once be allowed to draw that strange line that is so easy to draw round the Treasury to guard it from encroachments, but always found so difficult to draw round hospitals whenever they ask for a sympathetic consideration of their case. Nor do hospitals (as they have so often been told) imagine that a grant from the State comes from anywhere else than from the pockets of the nation of which they are themselves a part. They know this as well as their critics; but they may be forgiven for thinking that it is the task of a State to minimise, so far as is possible, any burdens inflicted by its financial policy, and see that they fall upon shoulders best able to bear them. There are stronger shoulders than those of the sick in hospitals. What need is there for hesitation? There is reason to think that such a grant would be approved by all sections of the community. The opinion of the Milk Re-organisation Commission is clear and definite and may be taken to represent the view of most people. The following passages are quoted from its report :—

"... As matters stand, there seems to be no quick and easy method of getting rid of the burden of the manufacturing surplus; and for the reasons we have given, it might be short sighted from the public standpoint to attempt to do so, apart from the hardship that would be inflicted on agriculture. At the same time there is a strong case on social grounds for the supply of cheap milk to certain selected classes of consumers. In both cases the only practical alternatives seem to be that either the State or liquid milk consumers should meet the cost. Our reasons for urging that liquid milk consumers should not be expected to meet it are, first, that it is inequitable, for the effect would be to tax the consumers of an important foodstuff in order to promote the policies for which the State as a whole should be responsible; and secondly, that it is contrary to the national interest, in that it must tend to discourage milk consumption . . . .

"The relief of the liquid milk market from the onus of the loss on manufacturing milk will also remove what we consider to be a legitimate grievance of hospitals and other institutions which take a large and regular supply of liquid milk. Any reduction in the prices charged to these organisations additional to that which would follow as a result of our proposals could, in our view, be based on social grounds, and if any further reduction is made the cost should be borne by the State . . . ."

Not so clear to understand are the public ministerial statements on this important matter; shortly they are :—

1. That hospitals receive preferential treatment under the scheme.
2. That the beneficent work performed by hospitals does not justify a claim to obtain supplies at prices which would involve compulsory charity on the part of the milk producers.
3. That the Minister does not feel that he could reasonably intervene.

It is necessary to state precisely the extent of the preference which hospitals enjoy; it is this :—

"That whereas other purchasers of milk direct from producers in quantities of less than 10 gallons pay an accommodation premium upon a sliding scale, hospitals doing the same pay a fixed accommodation premium of 1¾*d.* per gallon, whether they buy 10 gallons or any less quantity per day. This concession, applicable only to hospitals of less than 50 beds at the most, covers no more than 750,000 gallons of the total of nearly 7,000,000 gallons of milk bought yearly by the hospitals. In all probability, as many of these small hospitals cannot buy direct from the producers, the value of this small concession is much reduced."

It is also necessary to point out that the Milk Re-organisation Commission did not advise compulsory charity on the part of milk producers. On the contrary, their report urges that the cost of any concession should be borne by the State. Nor can the announcement that intervention on behalf of the hospitals would be unreasonable be reconciled with the statement that they enjoy preference (presumably as the result of intervention). Surely the excuse for such intervention as there is must be something better than that given for the unfortunate appearance of a baby in the well-known story.

In view of the eminently sane recommendation made by a representative body that had studied the subject and heard the views of those most concerned, is it not possible for Parliament to translate the sympathy which the Minister feels for the hospitals into practice and consider, if a Treasury grant is not an ideal method, what other methods are possible?

We are reminded of the pictorial appeal of Punch on behalf of Princess Elizabeth of York Hospital for Children :—A little girl sitting up in bed with a glass of milk in her hand, asks her nurse "How far down can I drink?"

Collecting Charities (Regulation) Bill.

Attention has been repeatedly drawn to the scandalous abuse of Charity and the word "hospital" by individuals and organisations to further their own ends and fill their own pockets. Hardly a week passes without enquiries from different parts of the country regarding the bona fides of this or that Society. Sometimes the name is familiar; sometimes the disguise is thin; sometimes the Black List of the Charity Organisation Society helps; but almost without exception there are grounds for suspicion; seldom is it possible to give a clean bill of health. The police are invariably helpful and anxious to put a stop to this abuse, but their hands are tied. The law gives no assistance to them or to the public, and much time, energy and trouble are wasted in efforts to bring home, legally, guilt of which there is no reasonable doubt. Reference is not here made to those organisations of doubtful wisdom the primary object of which is to promote the sale of some article of commerce, the hospitals entering into partnership and drawing commission on results. So far as voluntary hospital opinion generally can be gathered it is believed to be against these enterprises; not on the score of their honesty, but of their wisdom. While decisions must, as matters are at present, be left to the discretion of individual hospitals, it may not be out of place to remind them that the appeal value of their work, great as it is, has definite limits, and much harm may be done in frittering it away in what are generally very unproductive schemes. The excuse so often made that they "provide money for nothing" hides their reverse side, viz., that they make a large section of the public sick of the name of hospital, and open the door to schemes similar in appearance but in which the interests of hospitals, no longer even secondary, have disappeared altogether. It is somewhat significant that the Collecting Charities (Regulation) Bill, which is designed to control, to some extent, this freedom in exploitation, should have been promoted by the Association of Municipal Corporations. As police authorities they are naturally interested in putting a stop to what now gives so much trouble to their officers. At the same time, as Public Authorities and as disinterested parties, it may be that they see more clearly the dangers to the voluntary hospitals of the present laxity than the hospitals do themselves.

On the 9th March this Bill was read a second time in the House of Lords and referred to a Committee of the two Houses. It may be that this will provide an opportunity for a comprehensive consideration of a somewhat difficult matter and the promotion of legislation based upon a more complete knowledge of the evils to be overcome.

Standardisation and Group Purchase.

Standardisation means agreement among a group of users regarding the maximum suitability of an article for its purpose. For practical purposes the group must be a sufficiently large one and the article that which the group most requires. These are two only of the many conditions required before it is possible to say whether or not manufacturers of an article and consequently users, would receive benefit from its production on a large scale. What wonder then that a period of years has been found necessary by the British Standards Institution to bring about some of their standards. In short, standardisation is a matter of extreme difficulty; that is the first point that hospitals are asked to realise, especially those that naturally enough are impatiently hoping for anything that will reduce their ever-increasing cost.

Secondly, without at least some measure of standardisation, as, for example, that which involves agreement to buy in accordance with a definite sample, large scale or co-operative buying is an advantage to none.

Thirdly, the lure of a low price may obscure a failure to obtain value for money.

Fourthly, the formation of a group and the acceptance of a standard does not mean the end of difficulties, for there is the weapon of the "ring" to be overcome and the difficulties of checking delivery against sample; no easy matter even in the case of authorities able centrally to determine requirements and price, and a hundred times more difficult when independent voluntary hospitals are concerned. At the same time it must not be thought that the two committees which The British Hospitals Association set up some time ago have not done valuable work. As not infrequently happens in an enquiry of this kind, side issues emerge of value equal almost to that of its main object. It has been discovered that even if the majority of articles in use in hospitals do not lend themselves readily to standardisation, most of them have been tested in the laboratory of use, which may or may not confirm the test of the scientific laboratory. Data regarding these tests supply material upon which to separate the good from the bad and to prevent what Burke calls " the unpitied calamity of being twice caught in the same snare " (for our purpose the word " inexcusable " should take the place of " unpitied "). By an extension of this side of the work, a reduction in the number of types of articles used will be effected.

In this connection reference may be made to a combined effort between The British Hospitals Association and the Invisible Panel Warming Association. In the Departmental Report on the cost of hospitals and other public buildings issued by the Ministry of Health in 1937, reference was made to the subject of panel heating, and it was suggested that further enquiries regarding costs might be undertaken during the autumn of 1937. This suggestion was taken up by the Central Bureau of Hospital Information and a technically qualified engineer was sent round to a number of hospitals where panel heating had been installed, to collect, upon a specially prepared schedule, data based on the experience of use. The schedule had been circulated to the hospitals prior to the visit, and every effort was made to secure the accuracy of the information given. The summary of these schedules will be issued as a memorandum and can be accepted as an accurate statement of the views of those who have actual experience of panel heating in use.

It may be noted here that facilities for observing and measuring the performance of costly apparatus of this kind are not always installed with the apparatus itself. It is essential that if control is to be exercised and intelligent decisions arrived at, the necessary instruments of measurement and of record should be provided. The interest in this effort lies rather in the fact that it is the beginning of an intelligent co-operation between the producer and the user, by which alone products can be improved and better value for money obtained. At the moment another interesting experiment is being carried out with the help of the producers to see whether, for hospital purposes, linen or cotton is the better material. Here is an instance where the tests of the laboratory must be confirmed by the test of use. A hospital laundry is not necessarily a scientific department, and the point to discover is whether linen will stand up better than cotton to the somewhat severe test of hospital use and of hospital laundries.

In efforts of this kind the main things to observe are :—

(1) That the proper questions are asked.

(2) That all the answers are in accordance with fact: not always easy to ensure when those responsible for them are seldom trained technically and are too often without the necessary records or the means of keeping them.

It is probable that this side of the work of the recently established Committees will prove just as valuable as the creation of absolute standards or the bringing about of large-scale purchase. The field of work of this kind is almost limitless. Those who have interested themselves in the International Hospital Association are acquainted with the work of Professor Cederstrom, who is establishing in Stockholm a Central Record Office. This Office enjoys the financial support of the Swedish Government.

It is very desirable that there should be in this country a similar organisation adequately supported financially, for it may be the means of saving many thousands of pounds both by the prevention of the repetition of mistakes and the elimination of the less suitable. To some extent the Central Bureau of Hospital Information acts in this way, but much is still left unattempted. It is, however, something to the good that the Bureau has secured the help of the Bond Street Building Centre and so established a very necessary link between the Producer and the User.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

By SIR CHARLES HARRIS, G.B.E., K.C.B.

(Late Permanent Head of the Finance Department, War Office.)
Hon. Financial Consultant to the Central Bureau of Hospital Information.

In the past year, the number of Voluntary Hospitals included in the Directory of the Year-Book rose from 1072 to 1092; but of the additional 20 only 5 furnished figures, so that the Statistical Tables now cover 1008 hospitals, leaving 84, containing rather more than 4000 beds, of which beyond the bed-complements nothing is known statistically. When in 1931 the Year-Book was first published (figures for 1929) out of 1002 hospitals there were 71, containing nearly 4000 beds, which failed to give figures. Thus, though the picture has grown in size, the blank mount surrounding it is as broad as ever. To be strictly accurate, it should be mentioned that of the 84 hospitals mentioned above, 3 sent in accounts so late that no use could be made of them.

Owing to the pressure of work falling on the personnel of the Bureau for the Sankey Commission during 1936–7, the Year-Book of 1937 (1935 figures) was very late in appearing (mid-June). The routine request to Hospitals for the past year's figures was omitted in April 1936, thinking that as everybody knew the usual figures would be wanted, this omission would make no difference; but only 29 per cent. of Hospitals sent in their figures by the end of June 1936, though in 1933 72 per cent. had done so and the importance of punctuality had been constantly stressed since. In 1937, four separate applications having been made in April, July, September, and October, most of the slack was recovered (60 per cent. by June as compared with 62 in 1935, and over 99 per cent. by the end of October); but the high-water mark of 72 per cent. in June 1933 has not since been approached. A further illustration of the psychological conditions against which the Central Bureau has to work deserves mention. In October, 1937, Lord Donoughmore as Chairman of the Bureau's Committee signed a letter to the Chairman of each of the 203 hospitals which closed their account-years on dates other than 31st December, inviting him to fall into line with the great majority in this one point or, if he anticipated difficulty in so doing, to explain its nature in a personal reply to his letter. At the end of February 1938 only 75 of the Chairmen had even acknowledged it.

The aggregate financial results of 1936 were not unsatisfactory in themselves, but not all the signs were favourable, especially in view of the continuous growth in the numbers of both in- and out-patients, so that stationary or even increasing income up to a certain level does not mean prosperity, while the least falling-off means a greater loss than it shows on face. Total Receipts (Capital and Maintenance together) rose by £892,000 from £16,789,000 to £17,681,000; but total expenditure rose by £1,521,000 from £15,646,000 to £17,167,000, leaving a surplus of £514,000 against £1,143,000 in 1935 and £1,453,000 in 1934, or roughly a shrinkage of surplus in the ratio 3 : 2 : 1. On Capital alone, expenditure exceeded receipts by £409,000 as against £4,000 in 1935 and an excess of receipts over expenditure in 1934 of £451,000, which may be considered a typical example of the swing of the Capital pendulum. For Maintenance there were rises of £561,000 in Income, from £14,189,000 to £14,750,000, and of £786,000 in Expenditure, from £13,042,000 to £13,828,000, giving a Maintenance Surplus of £922,000 for 1936 against £1,147,000 for 1935 and £1,002,000 for 1934. But the £922,000, analysed by Areas, is made up of surpluses of £696,000 and £298,000 in the Provinces and Scotland respectively, less deficits of £56,000 and £16,000 in London and Ireland. This is the first time since 1926 (the General Strike year) that London has shown a deficit notwithstanding the distribution (£300,000 in 1936) made by King Edward's Hospital Fund.

Taking the figures for a series of years "per available bed," so as to eliminate (in a rough and ready way) the effect of growth of the hospitals on their finances, and going back to the year 1933 when the great depression of 1931 was succeeded by partial recovery, the average net surplus in Great Britain and Ireland, per bed, was in 1933, £12·7; 1934, £12·0; 1935, £13·5, and 1936, £10·6; a continuous fall except in 1935, in which year Free Legacies rose abruptly by £4 per bed over the 1934 figure. For London alone, the figures for surplus per bed were 1933, £14·7; 1934, £6·5; 1935, £6·6, and in 1936, deficit per bed £3·1. Coming still closer to the centre of disturbance, and taking the group A hospitals (100 beds and over) in London, the surpluses were, in 1933, £17·2 per bed; 1934,

£4·7; 1935, £4·3, and in 1936, deficit per bed, £7·3. In fact the deficit of £56,000 in that year, on London as a whole, arises entirely on group A, the medium and small hospital groups having each a surplus, amounting together to £38,000, to set against the group A deficit of £94,000. No single group in the Provinces or Scotland failed to make a surplus and though in Ireland there is considerable alternation of surplus and deficit, the figures are not large enough to influence the grand total importantly. In my report on 1935, I gave figures showing that in the period 1933–5, the very large excess expenditure (per available bed) of London hospitals (without regard to size) over the corresponding figures for the Provinces and Scotland, not only persisted but grew steadily. In 1936 the process was continued, and it is of interest to compare in similar fashion the figures for group A only :—

	Extra cost per available bed of Hospitals in London—
	Over Provinces.				Over Scotland.
	1933.	1934.	1935.	1936.	1933.	1934.	1935.	1936.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
All Hospitals	96·7	98·3	98·2	104·3	109·0	111·3	112·8	117·7
Group A only	106·3	108·0	108·6	113·7	121·0	122·0	124·3	128·8

In 1933, the starting point of these comparisons, the group A expenditure per available bed in Scotland (£123·1) was little more than half that in London (£244·1): at the end of three years, the Scottish figure had gone up 9 per cent. and the London figure a shade less. The Provinces figure (£137·8) had also gone up 9 per cent. to £150. There seems no indication of this unhappy pre-eminence of London being appreciably reduced, and the Year-Book figures do not explain its causes. Moreover, as those figures are nearly a year behind those of King Edward's Fund, and that Fund has no cognisance of the figures outside London, it is difficult to point to any existing Authority which might properly feel called upon to explore a situation that certainly requires some explanation.

As regards the Maintenance Surpluses and Deficits of individual hospitals, there was no such wholesale migration across the surplus–deficit line as in 1935, when 52 hospitals lost their surpluses. But the feature of rich hospitals getting richer and poor hospitals getting poorer is again in evidence, except in London, where getting poorer was a very general feature in 1936, the total of the surpluses there falling by just £100,000, or 36 per cent. The figures given by King Edward's Fund for the five years ending with 1936, as compared with the period a year earlier, are :—

								In 1931–35
36	Hospitals	had	5	surpluses	and	no	deficits	36
24	,,	,,	4	,,	,,	1	,,	23
29	,,	,,	3	,,	,,	2	,,	29

18	,,	,,	1	,,	,,	4	,,	14
8	,,	,,	no	,,	,,	5	,,	8
145								145

Scoring one point for each surplus during the period, the team's aggregate dropped only two points as compared with last year's card. It is also pointed out by the Fund that the groups (not hospitals) showing 5 consecutive group-surpluses in the period comprise most of the smaller general and cottage hospitals, women's, children's (long period) and ophthalmic hospitals.

In the following comparison of the two great heads of Income (Voluntary Gifts and Receipts for Services Rendered) I have again transferred the receipts under " Workmen's Contributions, Hospital Saturday Funds and Contributory Schemes " in the Provinces and Scotland from the former head to the latter, where they are placed in the King Edward's Fund statistics—not that the classification so amended is quite exact, but because unquestionably the great bulk coming in under this designation is given on the principle of do ut des and should be separated from those Voluntary Gifts which carry with them no expectation of personal benefit to the donor. The very important consideration that Contributory Schemes are not forms of insurance guaranteeing benefits under stated conditions in return for regular premiums, is in no way inconsistent with this reclassification. So treated, the figures for 1935 and 1936 in Great Britain are :—

	London.		Provinces.		Scotland.		Total.
	Voluntary Gifts.	Services Rendered.	Voluntary Gifts.	Services Rendered.	Voluntary Gifts.	Services Rendered.	Voluntary Gifts.	Services Rendered.
1936	1,428	1,867	1,743	4,790	342	427	3,513	7,084
1935	1,334	1,734	1,668	4,492	362	396	3,364	6,622
Increase +, Decrease − ...	+94	+133	+75	+298	−20	+31	+149	+462

After a general decline for some years, there is a fairly substantial gain under Voluntary Gifts except in Scotland, where the continued shrinkage affects all three heads: Subscriptions, Donations and Congregational Collections. Under Services Rendered there are important increases everywhere, amounting in sum to nearly half a million. Taking all the sources of Maintenance income other than Endowments (interest on investments), and reckoning per available bed, the proportion accruing from Services Rendered in London was just half the total (£103 out of £206); in the Provinces it was rather more than three fifths (£88 out of £137) and in Scotland just over one third (£42 out of £124). Welcome as these large "earnings" are, it must be remembered that they are not net revenue but can only be procured by expenditure, and therefore can never make up for a continued shrinkage of Voluntary Gifts; and it is for this reason most satisfactory that the ebbing tide of the latter has at last turned.

The "Free" Legacies received in Great Britain for the last three years have been :—

	London.		Provinces.		Scotland.		Total.
	Amount. £'000.	Per available Bed.	Amount. £'000.	Per available Bed.	Amount. £'000.	Per available Bed.	Amount. £'000.	Per available Bed.
1934	434	£24·67	720	£13·72	338	£34·86	1,492	£18·70
1935	580	32·51	854	16·05	371	37·76	1,805	22·32
1936	428	23·66	877	16·06	445	44·16	1,750	21·14

London figures are more likely to be affected by large individual legacies at uncertain intervals; the Provincial and Scottish figures run steadier, and taking the two together it has been shown in earlier reviews that, reckoning per available bed and eliminating mere fluctuations by a three years' moving average, there was a steady decline from 1928 (three years' average, £19·0 per bed) to 1934 (three years' average, £17); but in 1935 the trend was reversed, the three years' average rising to £17·3, and in 1936 the year's figure was £20·2 and the three years' average £18·9. Good; but in each Area the annual surplus (if any) is derived entirely from this fluctuating and uncontrollable source (i.e. apart from legacies there is everywhere a deficit); and it is less satisfactory to find that the share of the year's legacies absorbed to meet expenditure tends to increase seriously. In London, as already shown, the whole £428,000 of 1936 was so absorbed and a gap of £56,000 remained unfilled. In the Provinces and Scotland the figures for three years past are shown on the following page.

In Scotland, owing to the magnificent strength of the legacy tradition, there is no sign of danger at present, but in the Provinces the amount per bed absorbed by expenditure is definitely growing. and there are reasons to fear it may grow faster, In 1934, when London had much the same total of free legacies as in 1936 (£430,000) there was a surplus of £6·5 per available bed; next year it rose higher, owing to legacies jumping to £580,000; and by the second year it has been replaced by a deficit of £3·1 per bed. If the Provinces followed a similar course, the 1936 surplus of £12 per bed would not last long. And in view of the declared intention of further raising the price- and wage-levels, and the present campaign for costly concessions to Nursing Establishments—shorter hours, higher salaries and increased amenities—the outlook for expenditure is bad. Owing to the conversion of former municipal establishments from the Infirmary status to that of the full Hospital, there is now a greatly increased demand for nurses of the higher standard, with an inelastic supply. It is in fact the recruiting situation (formerly very familiar to me) arising from an increase in the Defence Forces, requiring in a short space of time men enough to fill the ranks of new units, as a temporary " capital " addition to the future normal demand for maintaining their strength; and means should be sought for meeting the " capital " part of this demand as far as possible by means of temporary expedients rather than by direct increases of pay and other emoluments which, once given, can never be discontinued. It is to be hoped that this aspect of the problem will not be overlooked in the official enquiry now proceeding.

The year 1936 was in general one of steadily rising wage-rates and prices both wholesale and retail, these movements implying recovery from the great depression following 1931 rather than early symptoms of coming inflation. On the other hand, returning prosperity did not fail to bring the hospitals a very welcome increase in Voluntary Gifts, as Table 4 shows. Tables 16 to 19 (in-patient and out-patient costs in individual hospitals) naturally reflect the rising price-level, and of the twelve teaching hospitals in London only one shows a reduction in the weekly cost of an in-patient, and that as a partial reaction from a peak figure in the year 1935. One of the largest shows an increase of 15*s.* a week in 1936, following on one of 2*s.* 6*d.* in 1935, which doubtless has a very special cause, but of this no hint is afforded, the Statistical Summary of King Edward's Fund having abandoned the attempt made in earlier years to render such anomalous figures intelligible to the public. The other increases in London teaching hospitals range from 6*s.* 3*d.* a week down to 1*s.*, 10*d.*, 9*d.* and even 6*d.*, suggesting in view of the definite rise of prices that serious attention has been given, in many if not in all of these hospitals, to the claims of economy.

In the Provinces, the rise is also general among the teaching hospitals, but in most cases small, the one marked exception being a rise of 9*s.* a week in a northern City; and in Liverpool it is interesting to note three small decreases against one rise of 3*s.* 2*d.*, the three (it may be hoped) arising from action taken in accordance with Lord Cozens-Hardy's Report. In Scotland, of the three teaching hospitals which analyse their costs, one shows an increase of 9*s.* 6*d.* per patient-week, with smaller increases in the other two; and the number of hospitals giving at least a total cost per patient-week has risen from 17 to 26, out of a total of 111 hospitals; a small but welcome improvement after many years of exhortation, to which both larger and smaller hospitals have contributed. Taking Great Britain (outside London) as a whole, in a few cases the total weekly cost given for 1935 has expanded into the full analysed cost in 1936, but Table 16 includes a number of hospitals, both English and Scottish, generally of the smallest size, which make their first appearance with only an unanalysed cost; so that, though as compared with no entry at all there is progress of a sort, it actually increases the numbers of " blanks " that disfigure the Tables. As the completion of these costing Tables is the consummation to which the whole Revised Uniform System of accounts leads up, it is worth while to restate the significance of these blanks. The System requires, in addition to the Income and Expenditure Account under standard Heads but making no distinction between in- and out-patients, the preparation of two Statistical Tables in which the whole expenditure, under each of the standard Heads, is divided under in-patients and out-patients respectively. Clear instructions are given for the apportionment of expenditure between these two Tables, and King Edward's Fund attaches such importance to them as to make their publication with the Annual Report of any hospital a sine qua non for affiliation to the Fund.

Out-patient expenditure may run into many thousands a year, and any hospital which (as some even very large hospitals outside London still do) declines to separate it from in-patient expenditure, thereby deprives of serious value any cost-figures it may give for a patient-week and unfits them for publication in Tables 16–19: but the Editor of the Year-Book has in certain cases of large hospitals retained the names in the Tables in the hope that in the next year the hospitals concerned may see fit to conform to the System to which the Tables pertain. This explains the genesis of most of the complete blanks. Other hospitals do not classify their expenditure in the Income and Expenditure Account under the prescribed Heads; this leads first to their exclusion from the important Table V (as noted thereon) and also to the fact that though they may apportion their expenditure correctly enough between in- and out-patients, only the unanalysed totals can be given in the Tables. Others, again, though classifying correctly, may fail to apportion their expenditure in detail, contenting themselves with a " shot " at the cost of an out-patient attendance, with the result that the in-patient cost becomes unconvincing and though unless it is manifestly incorrect, it may be admitted as an approximate weekly total, it cannot be analysed. These causes lead to the appearance of totals unanalysed. Lastly there are a few hospitals which, though they may have worked out their figures according to the System, decline to have them published for what may be called reasons of policy, such as an objection to the publication of an average figure covering both the private and the public wards, in view of the increasing importance of the former. It is noticeable that no hospital in London has taken any such objection.

With a view to directing the attention of each non-conforming hospital to the exact point of accountancy which in its case mars the desired uniformity, I would suggest that in future years a distinguishing mark should be placed against any blanks appearing in these Tables to indicate to which of the above causes the blank is due; and, further, that it may be considered whether anything is gained by retaining the names of hospitals with no figures against them, or admitting the names of fresh hospitals unless they are willing to classify and apportion their expenditure in accordance with the intention implicit in the Tables.

KITCHENS.

PARTICULARS OF CEILING COVERINGS AND VENTILATION.

Summary of Reports from Hospital Administrators in Various Parts of the Country.

Hpl.	No. of Beds.	Ceiling Covering.		Ventilation.
		Material Used.	Remarks.	Method Employed.	Remarks.
A	200	Plaster under glossy paint.
B	330	(a) Aluminium paint. (b) Paint and enamel finish.	(a) Lasts fairly well but discolours easily. (b) Provided that a good lead undercoating is used and a first-class job made of the finish it stands up to frequent washing and polishes well if caustics are not used. A quantity of steam and hot water pipes in most of the kitchens are not lagged and consequently deposits from carbonisation permanently discolour the ceilings and friezes near to the pipes.
C	270	Enamel.		Skylight windows and cross ventilation through side lights.	Little trouble is experienced with condensation.
D	240	Enamel.	Very quickly discolours and requires repainting fairly frequently.	Ordinary wall and window. Two large fans suspended from the ceiling.
E	250	Concrete cemented over.	Needs painting every year.	Exhaust fans with collapsible louvres to keep out flies.	They keep the air clearer.
F	210	(a) Wood glazed with lights 4 ft. 6 in. by 5 ft. (b) Cream enamel decoration.	(a) These are almost full length of the roof slope on either side. (b) Renewed annually.	Centrally pivoted windows in the gable peaks. Further ventilation by removing glass in the fixed lights in the gable peak and substituting bronze cloth.	The effect is very good and answers well.
G	360	Plaster and paint.	(In future kitchens now under consideration.)	Through hoods and shafts.	(In future kitchen now under consideration.)
H	250	Paint.	Considered better than whitewash, as the paint lasts longer and can be washed.	Roof windows.	Kitchen is a one-storey building.
I	360	Paint.	Painted every year.		Kitchen is at top of building, and natural ventilation is adequate.
J	160	Two coats of cream paint and two coats of steam-resisting enamel.		Central skylight out of which four large windows open.	This has been adequate, but the kitchen is shortly to be remodelled, when it is anticipated an extraction fan will be installed.
K	660	Glass and hard plaster.		Single-storey building with windows and roof lights only.
L	490	Three coats lead paint and one enamel.	(Ceiling originally cement and coated with water paint until the cement had finished "working.") The surface is washed down two or three times a year and remains in perfect condition. Steam has no effect on it.	Top-lighted. Front of kitchen faces south and is almost all glass and has three or four windows opening from top to bottom.	Fryers and steamers are covered by canopies attached to former chimney stacks having an up-take of over 70 ft.
M	230	Washed off and whitened every year.	Very satisfactory.	Two electric suction fans.	Consequently a minimum amount of steam and grease is allowed to settle on the ceiling.
N	380	High quality white paint and enamel.	Will stand frequent washing, but is apt to become yellow rather quickly.	Electric fans.	Satisfactory.
O	280	Plaster under glazed paint.	Not particularly satisfactory, but kitchen alterations are expected shortly.	"Lantern" in centre of ceiling from which windows open.
P	170	The portion of the kitchen where cooking is done has a glass roof with metal frames.	Not neat, but easily cleaned.	Some of the panes are made to open. At one side a large exhaust fan is fitted. Two opposite sides are of glass with ventilators which can be opened.	Single-storey kitchen.
Q	270			Large lantern light of glass running the entire length of the kitchen with windows ventilating.	Seems to work admirably.
R	280	White distemper over enamel.	Enamel without distemper causes too much condensation, whereas dirt and grease collect on the distemper and can be washed off each year. The enamel need only be renewed at intervals of some years.	Large lantern light. Practically the whole of the sides can be opened. Large extraction fan used when necessary.	The lantern light is "summer clouded" in sunny weather.
S	230	Tiled glass.	Little steam condensation. Only requires a thorough washing annually.	Adequate window space and outside ventilation by flue pipes.
T	360	Larger part covered by a glass dome, the remainder enamelled.		Glass dome gives light and ventilation—one or two ventilating trunks in addition carry off fumes from cooking apparatus.
U	200	Good surface paint.	Can be easily washed.	Electric fan.	Kitchen is at top of the hospital and all fumes get away easily.
V	180	Larger part covered by roof light, water paint on the remainder.		Adequate opening in roof light.	Cool and well ventilated.

CORK TILE FLOORING.

SUMMARY OF REPORTS FROM HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATORS.

Hpl.	Where in Use.	Length of Experience (years).	Cleaning.	Remarks.
A	Corridors in 1 ft. squares.	2¾	Minimum of effort.	Most suitable. Silent to walk on.
B	Radium Wards.	3	No trouble to keep clean and free from stains if maker's instructions are followed.	Satisfactory in all respects. Does not dent easily, but furniture is tubular. No very heavy traffic.
C	Pathological Laboratory.	4	Easily kept in good and attractive condition.	Satisfactory in all respects. No appreciable signs of wear. More or less silent. Does not dent easily, lose colour or become dirty. Is liable to frequent staining and stains rather easily.
D	Private Ward Block.	1½	Easily polished.	Does not show any cracks after fitting therefore should be aseptic. As a disadvantage it seems to mark easily and the marks remain. Silent, but it is only fair to say that great care was taken of the actual building of the six single wards. The floor joists are separate for each room—are made of special sound insulating materials. Walls also insulated.
E	Nurses' Home.	3½		Very satisfactory.
F	Nurses' Home Bedrooms, Corridors, and Staircase.	2		Has given every satisfaction. Wears very well and looks nice.
G	3 Patients' Bathrooms.	7	Easily kept clean.	Quite satisfactory. Silent and comfortable to the feet.
H	Nurses' Home Passages.	4	Necessary to be washed weekly. Occasionally given light dressing with floor polish.	Very satisfactory. Worn well. Colour has remained unchanged. Undoubtedly reduces noise. To be absolutely noiseless should be laid on cement rather than on wood. Not considered really suitable for ward floors.
I	Paying Patients' Block.	3½	Easily cleaned by polishing daily.	Wears well. Castors of bedsteads leave a slight impression after some time. Stains easily and absorbs stains which cannot be eradicated.
J	On the feed and take-off sides of Callender Ironing Machines in the Laundry.	3		Girls pivot on this flooring for 8 hours a day and 3 years' wear shows about ⅛ in. sagging in the middle.
K	4 small single Wards.	4		Pleasant to walk on. Satisfactory in all but the fact that it stains very readily and the marks are difficult or impossible to remove.
L	Maternity Home Corridors.	1½		No surface flaking and no crumbling at the edges. Does not appear to be affected by heat, water or stains and does not mark easily. Soundproof when laid on a solid foundation, but otherwise there is some echo. Has retained its colour.
M	Ground Floor Waiting Hall, Corridors, etc., also on first and second floors.	1½	Special polish applied once weekly and polished daily.	Quiet and does not tend to "rise." Marks fairly easily under heavy conditions. Almost impossible for it to retain its natural brightness. Fades under strong natural light. Difficult to keep clean on ground floor.
N			Polishes easily.	Attractive appearance. Very satisfactory if proper care is taken. Sometimes stains, dents and chips—but not easily.
O	X-Ray Dept.	2	No difficulty with regard to cleaning.	Does not stain, lose colour, become dirty or indented, looks as good as new.
P	3 large Wards and Main Corridor.	3		Very satisfactory in wards (many advantages over other flooring). Far from satisfactory in main corridor owing to grit and dirt brought in by visitors (700 on 3 days a week) and worked into the tiles. Impossible to keep clean.
Q	A few Corridors and 2 Wards.		More difficult to keep clean than rubber, linoleum or Terrazzo.	Become indented. In heavy traffic surface is bound to get roughened and become porous. Difficult to keep attractive.

MEMORANDUM No. 119.

FACTORIES ACT, 1937.

HOW VOLUNTARY HOSPITALS ARE AFFECTED.

Kindly prepared for the Bureau by W. E. C. Baynes, M.A., LL.M., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

1. The Factories Act, 1937, is both a consolidating and an amending measure. It replaces former Acts affecting factories and workshops; it does away with the distinction between factories and workshops, all of which are now comprised under the one term "factories"; and it embodies many changes in the law, all in the direction of securing safer and healthier working conditions for employees.

2. Hospitals which are carrying on any activity which brought them within the scope of previous Factory and Workshop Acts will now have to observe the more stringent requirements of the new Act. But hospitals which are not already affected by existing Acts are most unlikely to be engaged in any activity which will bring them within the scope of the new Act.

3. The only undertakings a hospital is likely to carry on which come within the scope of the Act are :—

(1) Laundries,
(2) Electrical power houses,
(3) Laboratories or workshops where medical or surgical requirements or other articles are manufactured for sale.

4. It should be noted that the Act only applies to the actual premises where these activities are carried on, and does not bring any other part of the hospital premises under its operation.

5. The requirements of the Act are so detailed and precise that no short summary of them would be of any value. The Home Office is preparing an official "abstract" of the Act which will have to be posted up in all factories, and which will be circulated in good time before the Act comes into operation on the 1st July next. This abstract will give hospitals all the information they require as to the conditions to be observed by them. A fuller explanation of the requirements of the Act will be found in "A Guide to the Factories Act, 1937," issued by the Home Office and obtainable from His Majesty's Stationery Office, price 6*d*. net.

B	200		One Local Authority 25 guineas annually, another 45 guineas annually for three years (commencing 1934) for which a maximum of 15 cases per annum must receive a full course of treatment.
C	100		A tentative arrangement of £1 per case * and a total not exceeding £20 per annum (less 2*s*. per case if the patient is a dependent of a hospital contributor).

Note.—7 Hospitals which have Orthoptic Clinics stated that they have no financial arrangements with the Local Authorities in respect of the treatment of school-children.

* This arrangement is not considered satisfactory, as only stubborn cases are referred to the hospital and a large number of attendances are necessary (in one or two cases over 100).

TREATMENT OF CHILDREN.

AGE LIMITS FOR ADMISSION TO CHILDREN'S WARDS, ETC.

With a view to assisting a hospital which was about to be rebuilt and considerably enlarged, an enquiry was sent to nine of the larger hospitals in London and the Provinces asking for information on the following points :—

(1) The view held at the hospital regarding responsibility for treatment of children between the ages of ten and fourteen years.

(2) The age limit in the Children's Wards and in the Out-patient Children's Clinic.

(3) The desirability of nursing children in the Women's Ward.

The following are extracts from the replies received :—

Hpl.

1. No separate Children's Physician or Out-patient Clinic at this hospital, so the first point does not arise. Patients are admitted to the Children's Ward up to the age of twelve, and there they are under the members of the Honorary Medical Staff who deal with adult patients. There are a number of beds in this ward in addition to the usual small cots, and these are retained for the large children. In certain cases children under twelve are admitted to adult wards.

2. The age for children is the same in the Out-patient Department as in the Wards. The Medical Board have laid stress upon the desirability of the children being separate from the adults, and there is a Children's Ward.

3. Children under the age of six years are not admitted except as emergencies. Any children admitted are received and nursed in the General Wards; boys over six years being put into the Male Wards. From many points of view these arrangements are very unsatisfactory. We have no Children's Ward as there is a large and important Children's Hospital in the town.

4. The children in our Children's Hospital do not exceed ten years of age, and this age applies to the Out-patient Children's Clinic.

5. In our Children's Block we admit children up to the age of eight, but no exact rule Hpl. is laid down as to the age of children attending the Children's Clinic in the Out-patient Department.

6. The rule of this hospital is that boys and girls under twelve years of age are considered suitable for the Children's Wards. On reaching that age they are immediately transferred to Adult Wards.

7. I have consulted the Children's Specialist at this hospital, who agrees with our general view on the responsibility for the treatment of children, which is as follows :

   (a) We consider that the responsibility for the treatment of children between the ages of ten and fourteen years should primarily be that of the Children's Specialist with, of course, such consultation with other departments as may be necessary.

   (b) The age limit in the Out-patient Children's Clinic is fourteen. The age limit in the In-patient Children's Ward is about eight, depending largely on the child's size and development. Above that age they are generally referred to a General Medical or Surgical Ward, and in practice the Children's Specialist continues to keep in touch with the treatment of the case in conjunction with his medical or surgical colleague.

   (c) We consider that children up to the age limit indicated for the in-patient ward should certainly be nursed in a separate children's ward.

8. The patients in Children's Wards are under the care of Honorary Surgeons and Physicians who share the General Work of the Hospital. In the Children's Wards we deal with children up to the age of ten, with provision for two cases up to twelve years. Over this age children go to Men's or Women's Wards.

9. The Physician in charge of the Children's Department deals with patients up to the age of twelve. Above that age such patients come under the care, in the ordinary way, of the General Physician.

I should have thought there would have been no doubt as to the treatment of children in the Women's Ward. At this hospital, except in very exceptional circumstances, children are admitted to the special Children's Ward.

SUMMARY

Only four of the nine hospitals state who is responsible for the treatment of children, viz :

SUMMARY.

Of the 16 instances given above, in 12 cases the machines are installed in the Nurses' Homes, in 3 cases in the Hospitals' Main Kitchens and in 1 in the Pulmonary Section of the Hospital.

As to whether the machine is noisy or not 9 stated that it is not noisy, 3 that it is noisy, and the remainder give such replies as "not unduly," etc.

5 state that a reduction in Staff has been possible as the result of installing the machine.

10 state that constant supervision of the machine is necessary and 5 that it is not.

12 out of the 16 state that the dishes are as completely washed as they would be by hand.

In reply to the question "To what extent have breakages been reduced?" 1 hospital states "considerably," another "by probably 10 per cent."; several others "slightly," "not materially," etc., and 3 state that there has been no reduction.

MEMORANDUM No. 125.

THE EFFECT OF SOFTENED WATER ON SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS AND STERILISERS.

In order to assist a hospital which contemplated the installation of a water softener to obviate or lessen the scaling of surgical instruments and sterilisers, an enquiry was sent to 20 of the larger hospitals in various parts of the country where water softeners are installed. A suggestion had been made that softened water might have a bad effect upon surgical instruments and sterilisers, and the following is a summary of the 19 replies received :—

At 8 of the hospitals the softened water is confined to the hot water installations or laundries.

Of the 11 hospitals which report that softened water is used for surgical instruments and sterilisers, 6 with up to 10 years' experience, stated that no adverse effect upon surgical instruments or sterilisers had been noticed since the installation of the water-softening plant.

The reports of the remaining 5 hospitals are given below in detail.

Hpl.	Beds.	Remarks.
A	200	No complaint received during the nine years a water-softening plant has been installed that there was any ill effect on either instruments or sterilisers. To make sure, however, for the last 14 days a very careful watch has been kept. Beyond very slight scale (or rather " dulling " of the shining of the plated articles) on the first day after regeneration, no ill effects have been noticed. Even this would not have been noticed if a special watch had not been kept. This may be due to insufficient back flushing, a very minute quantity of salt being left in the filter bed. Here I would add that we are now trying to run our softener at about 3–4° of hardness.
B	150	When first installed in 1925, we found that the softened water had a rather bad effect on the surgical instruments in the Theatre, making them a bad colour, to which the Surgeons took exception, so for a time we returned to hard water. After a while the softened water was again turned on to the Theatre, without further complaint.
C	250	Softened water has been used in our Operating Theatres for some years, and our Engineer reports that he has not noticed an adverse effect upon instruments and sterilisers. The steam coils of the sterilisers are chromium plated and require frequent cleaning.
D	380	The water softener has been found to be quite satisfactory in this hospital. The only articles which are affected detrimentally are those made of aluminium. It is suggested that in the installation of this type of plant it is important to have the advice of the makers in case there are incidental accompaniments such as copper and galvanised pipes which may require special consideration.
E	200	We have found no adverse effect upon surgical instruments and sterilisers, but enamel ware is affected when put in the sterilisers.

HOSPITAL LAW NOTES

By W. E. C. BAYNES, M.A., LL.M.

of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law,
Hon. Legal Adviser to The British Hospitals Association

The book deals with practically every legal or semi-legal point on which Secretaries of Hospitals have asked for information during several years past, and there is reason to hope that it may contain the answers to most of the legal problems that Secretaries ordinarily meet with in practice.
The subjects are arranged alphabetically and fully indexed to facilitate reference.

Press References

"This book should be one of the working tools of any hospital administrator, whether member of a committee or executive officer."—The Times.

"They cover almost every conceivable legal or semi-legal difficulty which a hospital secretary is likely to encounter. . . . The notes on road accident patients, on the recovery of income-tax under subscribers' seven-year covenants, and on liability for negligence are good instances of the clear and concise help which Mr. Baynes offers to his readers. The secretaries of hospitals and similar institutions who buy his little book will get good value."—The Lancet.

"It is difficult not to use extravagant superlatives in expressing one's admiration of this book. . . . No hospital secretary should be without it, and it should be worth almost its weight in Treasury Notes to proprietors of private hospitals and nursing homes, though of course it does not deal with the legal problems which are peculiar to their status."
British Medical Journal.

"This is a book which has long been needed. We desire to congratulate Mr. Baynes on the excellence of these notes which are characterized by accuracy throughout. They show a practical acquaintance with the law on the subjects dealt with, and no doubt this book will soon be in great demand. It certainly ought to have a long and useful career before it. Meantime it has our warmest recommendation."—The Medical Times.

"Beneath its unassuming title this book hides a mine of information for the hospital officer. One is struck by the simplicity of its language and by the avoidance of legal phraseology whenever possible. . . . The book should also be of value to any member of the legal profession whose practice brings him into contact with hospitals."—The Hospital.

"Of very great practical value to everyone connected with hospitals or with nursing and convalescent homes or similar institutions. It is a book which can be thoroughly recommended to anyone who is interested in the legal side of hospital work and management. Its accuracy can be vouched for."
The Nursing Times.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Object of Survey.

THE object of this Survey is the presentation in as full detail as possible of the position of the Hospitals in Great Britain and Ireland with reference to certain special features which may be summarised thus :—

(a) The facilities available for treatment,
(b) The extent to which they are utilised,
(c) The annual cost of maintaining these facilities, and (d) The sources and extent of the funds by which they are maintained.

Arrangement of Tables.

In the main tables the Voluntary Hospitals are grouped under the headings :—

Group A. Hospitals having 100 or more beds.
Group B. Hospitals having 30 to 99 beds.
Group C. Hospitals having less than 30 beds.

In addition, Tables of the details of the work and finances of the following special groups are given :—

General Hospitals associated with Medical Schools.
" " without Medical Schools containing 200 or more available beds.
" " " " " " 150 to 199 " "
" " " " " " 125 to 149 " "
" " " " " " 100 to 124 " "

" " " " " " Less than 30 " "
Children's Hospitals.
Ear, Nose and Throat Hospitals.
Eye Hospitals.
Women's Hospitals.
Maternity Hospitals, etc., etc.

Adjustments to figures.

An attempt has been made to present the figures of all hospitals upon the basis of the Revised Uniform System of Hospital Accounts. Slight divergences from the figures published in the Annual Reports of a few hospitals will consequently be found.

The figures in the Tables giving particulars of groups of hospitals include the returns made by a few hospitals covering a period longer than 12 months. This is generally due to some such cause as the changing of the date of the termination of the official year.

Definition of London area.

For the purposes of the Statistical Tables and the Directory of Voluntary Hospitals, London is regarded as the area covered by King Edward's Hospital Fund for London, viz., 11 miles from St. Paul's Cathedral. This area includes portions of the counties of Essex, Hertfordshire, Kent, Middlesex and Surrey in addition to the whole of the County of London. Similarly, all hospitals under the control of the London County Council are grouped together, whether they are situated in the County of London or not.

"Available" beds of London hospitals.

The figures of "available" beds of the London hospitals are the average daily bed complement during the year after deducting beds temporarily closed for Rebuilding, Extensions, Repairs, or other causes.

Thanks.

The Editors desire to express their thanks to King Edward's Hospital Fund for London for the leave, so kindly granted, to use the figures in its Statistical Report on the London hospitals for the purpose of compiling the Tables which appear in the Year-Book ; to all those Chairmen and Officers of the Voluntary Hospitals who so kindly supply the information upon which the statistics are compiled, and to the Public Authorities who also most kindly give particulars concerning the institutions for which they are responsible.

HOME AMBULANCE SERVICE

Telephone : Sloane 5821 & 7136.

Headquarters : The Joint Council of the Order of St. John and the British Red Cross Society, 12, Grosvenor Crescent, London, S.W. 1.

The Home Ambulance Service of the Order of St. John and the British Red Cross Society was set up in 1919 with the intention of providing better means of transport for the sick and injured throughout the country.

The end of the War afforded an opportunity for meeting a want that had become seriously urgent.

At the time the Armistice was signed, a large number of the ambulances of the Order and Society was still effective. Many had been shattered by enemy gun-fire. There was, however, a considerable number that could be made available for a further period of service.

Happily it was at this moment that the two organisations decided that the need for united efforts had not ceased with the War. It was arranged that for certain purposes they should continue to work together in promoting the health of the community, and one of the first steps they undertook in that direction was the organisation of a National Ambulance Service for England, Ireland and Wales.

The Committee has every reason to believe that the Home Ambulance Service has become an important link in the chain of organisations for the promotion of the health of the community, and that the co-operation of the Order of St. John and the British Red Cross Society in its establishment has been justified by the result.

HOSPITAL SERVICE AND PRIVATE HIRE.

Arrangements may be made by telephone or letter for the conveyance of patients from London to any part of the country.

A male attendant always accompanies the driver of the ambulance.

A charge of 10*s*. is made for the conveyance of a patient from any address within the administrative County of London to any Hospital in the same area.

By arrangement with Hospital Almoners a service is maintained for the transfer of patients from Hospitals to Convalescent Homes.

A female attendant accompanies all convalescent cases and if sufficient notice is given a similar arrangement may be made for the Private Hire Service.

LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL AMBULANCE SERVICE.

HEADQUARTERS : THE COUNTY HALL, S.E. 1. Telephone No. : Waterloo 3311.

I. Ambulances Supplied without Payment.

THE Council provides, within the Administrative County of London, ambulances, free of cost, for the conveyance to :—

A. Hospitals and/or private residences of :—

Persons meeting with accidents or suffering from sudden illnesses in the streets, public places, places of employment, etc.

B. Hospitals :—

(i) Persons meeting with accidents in their homes;

(ii) Persons suffering from illnesses in their homes if a medical practitioner certifies that the case is one of life or death, and that arrangements have been made for the reception of the patient in a hospital;

(iii) Parturient women, if the case is one of urgency, whether from the home, place of business, or elsewhere, on the application of a qualified medical practitioner or certified midwife, provided that either a doctor or midwife accompanies the case; and

(iv) Non-urgent cases of parturition.

In such cases admission to a maternity bed must have previously been arranged and a card (issued by the Council to hospitals and municipal maternity homes) for such admission obtained. This card must be handed to the ambulance attendant at the time of removal.

In these cases a nurse or a female friend must accompany the patient. The patient may also be accompanied by her husband.

(Note.—The Corporation of the City of London maintains its own ambulance service for dealing with cases of accident and illness occurring in the streets within the City area.)

How to obtain an ambulance for :—

Cases coming under classes A and B (i).

No telephone number is required; dial "999" and ask the operator for "AMBULANCE."

Cases coming under classes B (ii), (iii) and (iv).

Ask the telephone operator (or dial) for one of the headquarters telephone numbers, namely : WATerloo 6000, NEW Cross 2645, CENtral 6301, or REGent 4000.

When communication has been effected, particulars should be clearly given in this order : Place of accident or illness, name of the caller.

C. The Council's hospitals for infectious cases.

THE BOARD OF REGISTRATION OF MEDICAL AUXILIARIES.

THE Board was incorporated in 1936, being promoted by the British Medical Association, the Society of Apothecaries, the Chartered Society of Massage and Medical Gymnastics, the Society of Radiographers.

Membership of the Board is confined to (a) corporate bodies interested in the promotion of medical auxiliary work or any branch thereof, or the training, education, or examination of persons engaged or proposing to be engaged therein, or the improvement of their status; (b) individuals authorised to represent any corporate or unincorporated bodies so interested; and (c) such other classes of persons as the Council may from time to time determine.

The Board is not a qualifying body.

The primary object of the Board is to establish and make known a Register of persons engaged or intending to be engaged in technical and other work, and practise sciences and subjects ancillary, allied or auxiliary to or associated with medical science or the work of the medical profession, to be known as "The National Register of Medical Auxiliary Services." The Register is established for the following purposes :—

(1) To record the names of Medical Auxiliaries who are the holders of Approved Qualifications in Medical Auxiliary Work and also the particular qualifications of such Auxiliaries.

(2) To afford a mutually beneficial means of maintaining contact between Registered Medical Practitioners and duly qualified Medical Auxiliaries.

(3) To encourage the employment of duly qualified assistants and to prevent the exploitation by untrained persons of Medical Auxiliary Work.

The Board will also endeavour inter alia (a) to promote the training, education, and interests, and to improve the status, of medical auxiliaries; (b) to promote amendments in the law relating to medical auxiliary work and persons practising or intending to practise therein, and if thought desirable, to promote legislation for the State recognition and protection of an Official Register of persons engaged in Medical Auxiliary Work or any branch thereof; (c) to facilitate the exchange of information and ideas affecting Medical Auxiliary Work; (d) to advise and assist persons whose names are for the time being in the Register; (e) to provide information concerning Qualified Medical Auxiliaries, not only for the use of the Medical profession, but also of Institutions, Spas, Town and County Councils and other official bodies for general reference.

All medical auxiliaries whose names appear in the National Register have signed an undertaking that they will not undertake any Medical Auxiliary Work for any person except under the direction and control of a Registered Medical Practitioner.

The standards of curriculum and examinations of the following bodies have, as at the time of going to press, been assessed and approved by the Council of the Board for the purpose of qualifying Medical Auxiliaries for registration in the Register :—

Chartered Society of Massage and Medical Gymnastics;
Roll of Bio-Physical Assistants of the Society of Apothecaries of London;
Society of Radiographers;
Association of Dispensing Opticians, Ltd.

The standards of curriculum and examinations of other bodies are under consideration and if approved the names of their members will be eligible for inclusion in future issues of the Register.

TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR NURSES.

I. CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH HOSPITALS ARE APPROVED AS TRAINING SCHOOLS.

II. SCHEMES UNDER WHICH NURSES MAY BE TRAINED FOR ADMISSION TO THE STATE REGISTER.

CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH HOSPITALS ARE APPROVED AS TRAINING SCHOOLS.

BEFORE any hospital or group of hospitals can be approved the authorities of such hospitals are required to submit to the General Nursing Council particulars as to—

(a) training material available;
(b) the variety of experience assured to each probationer;
(c) in the case of grouped hospitals information as to the hospital in which each variety of experience is to be obtained, and
(d) the educational facilities offered and the systematic arrangements made whereby the attendance of each probationer at a series of lectures on the prescribed subjects is assured.

(1) For Training in General Nursing.

(a) As a Complete Training School.

The hospital must satisfy the Council that it provides experience in the four main services—medical, surgical, gynæcological, and children's diseases, and also an adequate staff and equipment for teaching in accordance with the prescribed Syllabus.

That it has at least one Resident Medical Officer.

That the period of training is not less than three years.

In a hospital where the work is mainly surgical approximately one-third of the beds should be devoted to medical work.

In a hospital where the work is mainly medical, approximately one-third of the beds should be devoted to surgical work.

(b) Associated Hospitals.

(i) There are other hospitals which are sufficiently large but from deficiency of clinical material in some branch cannot be approved as Complete Training Schools. Such hospitals will be required to associate themselves with another hospital or hospitals in order to supply for their nurses that part of the training in which they are deficient.

The hospitals applying for approval under this category must each have a Resident Medical Officer.

The period of training must extend over three years and six months, of which not less than six months must be spent in the hospital which is supplying the deficiency of clinical material.

The Council is prepared to consider any scheme for carrying out such an arrangement, and it will be for the hospitals who propose to associate themselves to satisfy the Council that the arrangements will be adequate to afford a complete training.

(ii) The Council is prepared to consider schemes whereby a general hospital for men only, one for women only, and one for children only, may respectively work together to furnish the necessary training according to the prescribed Syllabus. The period of training may be divided amongst the three hospitals as may be convenient, provided that adequate training in the four main services is assured, and that the subjects of the Preliminary Examination (see Preface to Syllabus of Subjects for Examination) are taught in the first hospital to which the nurse goes for training, so far as they can be taught in that hospital. The training in this case extends over four years if the Council so decide.

Such hospitals will be entitled "Associated Hospitals."

(c) Affiliated Groups of General Hospitals.

There are many hospitals which are not sufficiently large to provide adequate clinical material, teaching staff, and equipment for complete training, but these may be approved in affiliation with a hospital of the kind dealt with in Regulation (1) (a) above.

The period of training must extend over four years, of which the first two years must be spent in the smaller hospital in preparation for the Preliminary Examination. The Probationers should be transferred to the larger hospital for the final two years, after passing the Preliminary Examination.

The Council is prepared to consider any scheme for carrying out such an arrangement, and it will be for the hospitals who propose to affiliate themselves to satisfy the Council that the requirements for a four years' training are fulfilled by the scheme proposed.

Such hospitals will be entitled "Affiliated Hospitals."

(d) Affiliated Groups of Special and General Hospitals.

Nurses trained for two years in approved Special Hospitals as mentioned below will be eligible for the Final Examination for the General Part of the Register when they have undergone a subsequent two years' training in a General Hospital as defined in (1) (a).

The two years' training in the Special Hospital must include the subjects of the Preliminary Examination. This examination must be taken from the Special Hospital.

Special Hospitals to which the above rule applies.

Fever, Gynæcological, Ophthalmic, Ear and Nose, Cancer, Incurable, Orthopædic, Tuberculosis, Urinary Diseases, Venereal Diseases, Nervous Diseases, Children's Diseases, and (provided that the applicant has had training in bedside nursing for not less than six months) Mental Diseases.

In exceptional cases, on the recommendation of the Education and Examination Committee, and after detailed consideration of each case, the Council may permit nurses to proceed from a Special to a General hospital forthwith after passing the Preliminary Examination, or under special conditions (after completing one year's training) and after remaining for the two ensuing years at the said General Hospital to return to the said Special Hospital for the completion of the fourth year of training, but that no such permission be granted unless the authorities of the Special Hospital satisfy the Council:—

(a) that the training of such nurses will be adequately continued; and

(b) that the nursing of their patients presents difficulties which form a claim for special consideration.

Such hospitals will be entitled "Affiliated Hospitals."

(2) For Training in Male Nursing.

The hospital must satisfy the Council that it furnishes adequate material for the training of Male Nurses and provides the requisite staff and equipment for teaching in accordance with the prescribed Syllabus.

The period of training must be not less than three years in a Complete Training School for Male Nurses;

or

four years in an Affiliated Training School for Male Nurses;

or three and a half years in an Associated Training School for Male Nurses.

(3) For Training in Mental Nursing, and for Nurses for Mental Defectives.

(a) As a Complete Training School.

The hospital must satisfy the Council that it furnishes adequate material for the training of Mental Nurses, and provides the requisite staff and equipment for teaching in accordance with the prescribed Syllabus.

The period of training must be not less than three years, including not less than six months bedside nursing as detailed in Section IV, Part I, of the Syllabus of Subjects for Examination, before the candidate enters for the Preliminary Examination.

(b) As an Affiliated Training School.

The Council is prepared to consider a scheme by which a Mental Hospital which has not sufficient material to afford a complete training may affiliate itself to a Complete Training School for Mental Nurses.

The period of training under this category must extend over four years, of which the first two years must be spent in the smaller hospital in preparation for the Preliminary Examination. The Probationers should be transferred to the larger hospital for the final two years, after passing the Preliminary Examination.

Note.—Those Institutions which cannot provide sufficient bedside nursing for their staff can do so by arrangement or by affiliation with a General Hospital, subject to the approval of the Council.

(4) For Training in Sick Children's Nursing.

(a) As a Complete Training School.

The hospital must satisfy the Council that it furnishes adequate material for the training of Sick Children's Nurses, and provides the requisite staff and equipment for teaching in accordance with the prescribed Syllabus.

The period of training must be not less than three years.

There should be at least one Resident Medical Officer.

(b) As an Affiliated Training School.

The Council is prepared to consider a scheme by which a Sick Children's Hospital which has not sufficient material to afford a complete training may affiliate itself to a Complete Training School for Sick Children's Nurses.

The period of training under this category must extend over four years, of which the first two years must be spent in the smaller hospital in preparation for the Preliminary Examination. The Probationers should be transferred to the larger hospital for the final two years, after passing the Preliminary Examination.

(c) The Council is also prepared to consider a scheme by which an Infant's Hospital may affiliate itself to a Complete Training School for Sick Children's Nurses.

The period of training under this category must extend over four years, of which the first two years must be spent in the Infants' Hospital in preparation for the Preliminary Examination. The probationers should be transferred to the Sick Children's Hospital for the final two years, after passing the Preliminary Examination.

(5) For Training in Fever Nursing.

(a) As a Complete Training School.

The hospital must satisfy the Council that it furnishes adequate material for the training of Fever Nurses, and provides the requisite staff and equipment for teaching in accordance with the prescribed Syllabus.

The period of training must be not less than two years.

(b) As an Affiliated Training School.

The Council is prepared to consider a scheme by which a Fever Hospital which has not sufficient material to afford a complete training may affiliate itself to a Complete Training School for Fever Nurses.

The period of training under this category must be not less than two years and six months, of which not less than one year must be spent at the Complete Training School for Fever Nurses.

The Preliminary Examination must be passed before the nurse enters the Complete Training School for Fever Nurses.

Notes.—(1) The Council is prepared to consider Schemes for Affiliated or Associated training not mentioned in the foregoing, provided that such schemes afford comprehensive training and include not less than two years in a complete General Training School.

(2) The Council is prepared in certain cases to consider applications, on behalf of individual nurses, for training by special affiliation between any two approved Hospitals, provided that one at least is approved as a complete General Training School.

(3) The General Nursing Council considers that it would be greatly in the interests of the training of nurses if preliminary training schools could be instituted in various centres throughout England and Wales.

(4) In every case the Institution where the training takes place must be "either an Institution approved by the Council in that behalf, or in the service of the Admiralty, the Army Council, or the Air Council." (Nurses' Registration Act 1919, 3(2) (b).)

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE BRITISH X-RAY AND RADIUM PROTECTION COMMITTEE.

FIFTH REVISED REPORT (JANUARY 1938).

With the object of arresting the sequence of casualties to X-ray and radium workers, the British X-ray and Radium Protection Committee was formed in 1921, as the result of co-operative action between the Royal Society of Medicine, the Röntgen Society, the British Association for the Advancement of Radiology and Physiotherapy (now the British Institute of Radiology incorporated with the Röntgen Society), the Institute of Physics, the Radium Institute, London, and the National Physical Laboratory. The personnel of the Committee was afterwards widened to include representatives from the provincial schools.

The Committee issued its first recommendations in July 1921. Successive revised reports followed in December 1923, May 1927 and June 1934. At the instance of the British Committee, International Recommendations for X-ray and Radium Protection were adopted at Stockholm in 1928 by the Second International Congress of Radiology. These were largely based on the British proposals.

The problem of adequate protection for the X-ray worker has been substantially eased by the introduction of the self-protected tube and more recently by the "shock-proof" tube and equipment. Account is taken of this in the present (Fifth) Report of the British Committee, which follows in the main the form of the International Recommendations, and contains a number of alterations and additions based on the experience of the Committee and of the National Physical Laboratory in its inspection and testing work carried out in association with the Committee.

Copies of the Report may be had on application to the Hon. Secretaries of the Protection Committee at 32, Welbeck Street, W.1, or the Director, The National Physical Laboratory, Teddington, Middlesex.

I. INTRODUCTION.

1. The dangers of over-exposure to X-rays and radium can be avoided by the provision of adequate protection and suitable working conditions. It is the duty of those in charge of X-ray and radium departments to ensure such conditions for their personnel. The known effects to be guarded against are :—

(a) Injuries to the superficial tissues;
(b) Changes in the blood and derangement of internal organs, particularly the generative organs.

2. The evidence at present available suggests that under satisfactory working conditions a person in normal health can tolerate * with impunity exposure to X-rays and radium gamma rays to an extent of about one international röntgen (r.) per week. On the basis of continuous irradiation during a working day of seven hours and a working week of five days this figure corresponds approximately to a "toleration" dosage rate of 10^{-5} r. per second. The protective values given in these recommendations are generally in harmony with this figure under average conditions.

II. WORKING HOURS AND OTHER CONDITIONS.

3. The following working hours, etc., are recommended for whole-time X-ray and radium workers :—

(a) Not more than seven working hours a day. Whole-time X-ray and radium workers should not be called upon for other hospital service.

* The word "toleration" here is understood to have the significance attached to it in "International Recommendations for X-ray and Radium Protection," September, 1937.

(b) Not more than five working days a week. The off-days to be spent as much as possible out of doors.

(c) Not less than four weeks holiday a year, preferably consecutively.

(d) No person should be employed as an X-ray or radium worker whose blood (as tested by a complete investigation of the blood), or general health, is unsatisfactory.

(e) The amount of X or gamma radiation received by operators should be systematically checked to ensure that the tolerance dose is not exceeded. For this purpose, photographic films or small capacity condensers may be carried on the person.

Before beginning work or training, the normal leucocyte level should be found by making three total and differential blood-counts in the afternoon. (The counts may be made on different afternoons, or on the same afternoon at half-hourly intervals.) If none of the total counts reach 6,000 per c.mm. and none of the lymphocyte counts reach 1,200 per c.mm. the applicant should not be accepted for service.

Periodical total and differential blood-counts of the worker should be made during the afternoon period, every six months in the case of the X-ray worker, and every three months in the case of the radium worker. The six-months' period may be considerably extended in the case of X-ray workers in departments which otherwise comply with the Recommendations of the Protection Committee.

If at any time there is found to be a decided and sustained drop in either the total leucocyte or the total lymphocyte count the worker should cease work and be placed under treatment for an adequate period. On resumption of work every care should be taken and the circumstances of the work should be reviewed so as to prevent a recurrence.

III. GENERAL X-RAY AND RADIUM RECOMMENDATIONS.

4. X-ray and radium departments should not be situated below ground-floor level. Damp rooms should be avoided.

5. All rooms, including photographic dark rooms, should be provided with windows, affording good natural lighting and ready facilities for admitting sunshine and fresh air whenever possible.

6. All X-ray rooms, including photographic dark rooms, should be provided with adequate ventilation. In general, exhaust ventilation is usually sufficient to meet the requirements, but in certain cases, particularly where it may be necessary to have recourse to air-conditioning, inlet (plenum) ventilation or a combination of the two systems may be indicated. For rooms of normal dimensions (say 3,000 cu. ft.) in which corona-free apparatus is installed the ventilating system should be capable of renewing the air of the room not less than six times per hour, and up to ten times may be required in the case of apparatus which is not corona-free. Large rooms require proportionately fewer changes of air per hour than small ones. In all cases low level fresh air inlets and high level outlets should be arranged to afford cross-wise ventilation of the room.

7. All rooms should preferably be decorated in light colours.

8. A working temperature of about 18° to 21° C. (65° to 70° F.) is desirable in X-ray rooms.

9. X-ray rooms should be large enough to permit a convenient lay-out of the equipment. A minimum floor area of 250 sq. ft. (25 sq. m.) is recommended for X-ray rooms, and 100 sq. ft. (10 sq. m.) for dark rooms. Ceilings should be not less than 11 ft. (3·5 m.) high.

10. X-ray generating apparatus employing mechanical rectifiers should preferably be placed in a separate room from the X-ray tube.

IV. X-RAY PROTECTIVE RECOMMENDATIONS.

11. An X-ray operator should on no account expose himself to a direct beam of X-rays.

12. An operator should place himself as far as practicable from the X-ray tube. It should be borne in mind that if valve tubes are used improperly they may produce X-rays.

13. The X-ray tube should be self-protected, or otherwise surrounded as completely as possible with protective material of adequate lead equivalent.*

14. The following lead equivalents, which are based on average conditions, are recommended.

* It should be pointed out that the protective lead values of certain materials are much affected by a change in the exciting voltage of the X-ray tube. This applies particularly to materials in which elements lighter than lead furnish the chief protection. In the case of protective slabs or plasters made up of mixtures of materials, the difficulty of securing uniform mixing should be met by a generous margin of safety in estimating the required thickness. As a rough working rule, solid brick and concrete are equivalent to about 1 per cent. of the same thickness of lead.

They may require modification for high output tubes or considerable working distances.

(A) Diagnostic Work.

15. In the case of diagnostic work with other than completely protected tubes, the operator should be afforded protection from stray radiation by a screen of a minimum lead equivalent of 1 mm.

16. All fluoroscopic examinations should be conducted as rapidly as possible with minimum intensities and apertures. As an additional precaution it is recommended that wherever possible the circuit on the primary side of the apparatus used for fluoroscopy should incorporate a limiting device to guard against excessive tube-currents during such examinations. The material of the diaphragm should be equivalent to not less than 2 mm. of lead. The diaphragm should be of the rectangular type and the design should be such as to permit it to be completely closed. To prevent the lateral escape of direct radiation, the diaphragm should be fitted within a protective enclosure. Palpation with the hand should be reduced to a minimum.

17. The lead glass of fluorescent screens should have the protective values recommended in paragraph 14.

18. In the case of screening stands, the fluorescent screen should, if necessary on account of the small size of the screen, be provided with a protective "surround" so that adequate protection against direct radiation is afforded for all positions of the screen and diaphragm.

19. All couches and stands for fluoroscopy should be provided with adequate arrangements for protecting the operator against scattered radiation from the patient. In the case of a couch, this can take the form of a protective screen, mounted on the carriage and of material equivalent to not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ mm. of lead. The screen should have a width of not less than 2 ft., and should project 9 or 10 in. above the couch. In the case of a stand, an "apron" of protective material not less than 2 ft. wide and of not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ mm. lead equivalent should be attached to the lower edge of the screen.

20. Protective gloves, which should be suitably lined with fabric or other material, should have a protective value not less than $\frac{1}{3}$ mm. lead throughout both back and front (including fingers and wrist). Protective aprons should have a minimum lead value of $\frac{1}{2}$ mm.

(B) Treatment.

The use of some form of calibrated ionisation dose-meter during treatment is strongly recommended.

21. In the case of X-ray treatment, the operator should be stationed outside the X-ray room behind a protective wall, the lead equivalent of which will depend on the circumstances. In the case of a single X-ray tube excited by voltages up to about 200 kv., the protective wall should have a lead equivalent of not less than 2 mm. The wall protection should be increased in the case of higher exciting voltages or of heavy tube currents, or if the protective value of the X-ray tube enclosure falls short of the values given in paragraph 14. In such event the remaining walls, floor and ceiling may also be required to provide supplementary protection for adjacent occupants to an extent depending on the circumstances. Full protection should be provided in all those directions in which the direct beam could operate dangerously.

Inspection windows should have protective lead values equivalent to that of the surrounding screen or wall.

22. In those cases in which an X-ray tube is continuously excited and treatment periods are regulated by means of a shutter, some form of remote control should be provided for the shutter to ensure that the operator is not exposed to direct radiation while manipulating the shutter or filter.

23. Efficient safeguards should be adopted to avoid the omission of a metal filter during X-ray treatment; for example, by an interlocking device or by continuously measuring the emergent radiation.

Protective screens and applicators ("cones" or localizers) used in treatment to define the ports of entry of X-ray beams should be sufficiently thick to reduce the dosage rate outside the direct field of irradiation to less than 10^{-3} r. per second.

V. ELECTRICAL PRECAUTIONS IN X-RAY ROOMS.

Attention should be drawn to the fact that with the more powerful X-ray plants in use to-day the possibilities of fatalities are increased.

24. The floor covering of X-ray rooms and machine rooms in which there are bare high-tension conductors should be of insulating material such as wood, rubber or linoleum. Rubber-soled shoes form a useful supplementary precaution.

25. Where permanent overhead conductors are employed they should be not less than 9 ft. (3 m.) from the floor. They should consist of stout metal tubing or other coronaless type of conductor. The associated connecting leads should be of coronaless wire kept taut by suitable rheophores.

26. Wherever possible earthed guards or earthed sheaths should be provided to shield the more adjacent parts of the high-tension system. Unshielded leads to the X-ray tube should be in positions as remote as possible from the operator and the patient. The use of "shock-proof" X-ray equipment in which the high-tension circuit is completely enclosed in earthed conductors is specially recommended. In all cases, however, indiscriminate handling of X-ray tubes during operation should be forbidden. Unless there are reasons to the contrary, metal parts of the apparatus and room should be efficiently earthed. The application of non-shockproof tubes to circuits excited by transformers operating with the mid point of the secondary winding earthed is not recommended.

27. Main and supply switches should be very accessible and distinctly indicated. They should not be in the proximity of the high-tension system, nor should it be possible for them to close accidentally. The use of circuit breakers in each live phase conductor is recommended. Over-powered fuses should not be used. If more than one apparatus is operated from a common generator, suitable high-tension multi-way switches should be provided. In the case of some of the constant-potential generators, a residual charge is held by the condensers after shutting down. A suitable discharging device should therefore be fitted. Illuminated warning devices which operate when the equipment is "alive" serve a useful purpose. Printed first-aid instructions dealing with electric shock are available *, and the staff should be trained in their use.

28. Some suitable form of kilovoltmeter should be provided to afford a measure of the voltage operating the X-ray tube. Whenever possible a safety spark-gap should be provided.

29. X-ray units in operating theatres should be designed and installed so as to be rendered "sparkproof," as far as possible.

30. Risk of shock from primary circuits and auxiliary wiring supplied from alternating current mains should not be overlooked, especially in the cases of three-phase installations and auxiliary equipment in dark rooms, etc. The use of flexible cords other than those sheathed with tough rubber or flexible metallic envelopes should be avoided, and all primary circuits and apparatus should generally be in accordance with the current "Regulations for the Electrical Equipment of Buildings," issued by the Institution of Electrical Engineers.

31. In the event of electrical fires, the main switch of the apparatus should be turned off immediately. Water should never be used for this kind of fire, or where there is oil. Leakage of oil from transformers and high tension switch-gear should receive prompt attention. Provision of dry chemical extinguishers is recommended. Asbestos "fire blankets" are also useful.

VI. FILM STORAGE PRECAUTIONS.

32. The use of non-inflammable X-ray films is strongly recommended. In the case of inflammable films, the following precautions should be taken as regards their use and storage.

33. X-ray Rooms.

(a) In all rooms where X-ray films are handled and stored naked lights and open fires should be prohibited. Smoking should be prohibited in or near film cabinets or film stores. Films should not be placed near steam pipes, radiators, or the like. A ready supply of fire extinguishers, together with buckets of water and sand should be available. The best means of extinguishing burning celluloid appears to be by the application of water.

(b) Electric light installations should be of a permanent character. Electric light bulbs in or near film stores or cabinets should be enclosed in strong glass globes.

(c) Generous ventilation should be provided in X-ray rooms. As recommended in paragraph 6, the plan of an independent exhaust fan in each room is to be preferred to a duct system common to a number of rooms. Doors should be arranged to open outwards, particularly from film-drying rooms and dark rooms.

* See, for example, those which may be obtained from the Electrical Review, Dorset House, Stamford Street, London, S.E. 1.

(d) The stock of X-ray films, whether unexposed or developed, should be kept down to the minimum. The stock of film records should be subjected to periodical drastic weeding out. Discarded films should be at once deposited in strong fire-proof metal containers with self-closing lids, and destroyed at frequent intervals. They should not be placed in general refuse bins, or burnt in a closed vessel.

(e) Stocks of unexposed films for immediate use or current files of developed films should be stored in cool and dry lock-up thermally insulated metal or hard-wood cabinets. Such a stock should not exceed a total of about 50 lb. (i.e. about 1,000 12 by 10 in. films) distributed among several cabinets. Cabinets for unexposed films should be lead lined.

(f) Developed films which are temporarily taken into Hospital Wards or Theatres for the convenience of the Medical Staff, should not be left lying about in table drawers or cupboards, but should be kept in suitable metal containers. Such films should be returned to the X-ray department as soon as possible.

34. Film Stores.

Stocks of film exceeding about 50 lb. should not be stored in the X-ray department, but in a special dry, cool, and well-ventilated room reserved exclusively for the purpose. The main requirements of such a room are as follows :—

(a) The situation of the film store should not be such as to endanger the means of escape from any part of a building. The store should not be in the proximity of a lift-shaft or staircase-well, or near an intake or outlet of a general duct-ventilating system. In no circumstances should the store communicate with a general duct-ventilating system.

The store should preferably be an isolated single-storey building with independent access. Failing that, the store may be placed on the roof of a building, or if that is not feasible, in one of the higher stories in as isolated a position as possible.

(b) The walls, floor and ceiling of the store-room should be fireproof and of robust construction. The doors should be fireproof and of a self-closing, closely-fitting type opening outwards. If the store-room forms part of a main building, a useful further precaution is a fireproof vestibule with a second fireproof door.

(c) The store should be provided with a direct vent to the outer air, preferably on the side remote from the most adjacent building. Such a vent should not normally be less than a square foot in effective area, a figure which may require to be exceeded for large stores. The vent may be protected against weather, etc., by thin unwired glass or other equally frail device.

(d) The store may well be equipped with steel cabinets. If the store is designed to carry unusually large stocks of films (exceeding, say, 1 ton), it should be divided into completely isolated fireproof compartments each with its own vent and fireproof door.

(e) The temperature of the store should be maintained at a moderate figure. If the roof is exposed to the sun, suitable thermal lagging may be necessary in hot climates. It seems certain that good quality celluloid does not ignite spontaneously at any temperature attained under ordinary room conditions.

(f) The store should be equipped with an automatic water sprinkler device.

(g) If windows are provided in a film store, they are best situated in a north wall, though other considerations may be more important. Any windows immediately above the windows or vent of the store-room should be provided with wired glass.

VII. X-RAYS FOR INDUSTRIAL AND RESEARCH PURPOSES.

35. The preceding recommendations will probably apply to the majority of conditions under which X-rays are used for industrial and research purposes. Should screening be carried out continuously over long periods the protection afforded should be greater than that specified for hospital practice. In any case the protective arrangements and working hours should be such that the radiation received by the operator does not exceed 0·2 r. per day.

VIII. RADIUM PROTECTIVE RECOMMENDATIONS.*

(A) Radium Salts.

Protection for radium workers is required from the effects of :—

(a) Beta rays upon the hands;

(b) Gamma rays upon the internal organs, vascular and reproductive systems.

36. In order to protect the hands from beta rays, reliance should be placed, in the first place, on distance. The radium should be manipulated with long-handled forceps, and should be carried from place to place in long-handled boxes, lined on all sides with at least 1 cm. of lead. All manipulations should be carried out as rapidly as possible.

* See also the National Radium Commission's publication on " The Care and Custody of Radium," p. 318.

37. Radium, when not in use, should be stored in a safe as distant as possible from the personnel. It is recommended that the safe should be provided with a number of separate drawers individually protected. The amount of protection should correspond to the values given in the following table. These values, which are based on working conditions where there is proximity to radium, may be reduced for larger working distances.

Maximum quantity of radium element.	Thickness of lead.
gm.	cm.
0·2	8·5
0·5	10
1·0	11·5
2·0	13
5·0	15
10·0	17

38. A separate room should be provided for the "make-up" of screened tubes and applicators, and this room should only be occupied during such work. The room should be provided with an exhaust fan, the control switch for which should be outside the room.

39. In order to protect the body from the penetrating gamma rays during handling of the radium, a screen of not less than 2·5 cm. of lead should be used, and proximity to the radium should only occur during actual work and for as short a time as possible.

40. The measurement room should be a separate room, and it should preferably contain the radium only during its actual measurement.

41. Radium containers should be tested periodically for leakage of radon, as quantities of radon may otherwise accumulate in radium safes containing leaky containers. Where possible, safes should be fitted with exhaust fans, which should be operated for ten minutes before the safe is opened.

42. Nurses and attendants should not remain in close proximity to patients undergoing radium treatment with quantities exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ gm.

43. All unskilled work or work which can be learnt in a short period of time should preferably be carried out by temporary workers, who should be engaged on such work for periods not exceeding six months. This applies especially to nurses and those engaged in "making-up" applicators.

44. Discretion should be exercised in transmitting radium salts by post. In the case of small quantities (less than 10 mg. of radium element) it is recommended that the radium be enclosed in a container covered with 3 mm. lead, whereas for quantities between 10 and 50 mg. radium element the container should be supported in the centre of a large box, e.g. minimum dimensions 1 × 1 × 1 ft. Packages containing more than 50 mg. of radium are preferably sent by rail or hand under suitable conditions of protection.

(B) Radon (Radium Emanation).

45. In the manipulation of radon, protection against the beta and gamma rays has likewise to be provided.

46. The handling of radon should be carried out, as far as possible, during its relatively inactive state.

47. The escape of radon should be very carefully guarded against; the room in which it is prepared should be provided with an exhaust fan, the control switch for which should be outside the room.

48. Where radon is likely to come in direct contact with the fingers, thin rubber gloves should be worn to avoid contamination of the hands with active deposit. Otherwise the protective measures recommended for radium salts should be carried out.

49. The pumping room should preferably be contained in a separate building. The room should be provided with a connecting tube from the special room in which the radium is stored in solution. The radium in solution should be heavily screened to protect persons working in adjacent rooms. This is preferably done by placing the radium in solution in a lead-lined enclosure, the thickness of lead recommended being according to the table above.

(C) Radium Beam Therapy or Radium Teletherapy.

50. The risks to the operator attendant on the use of large quantities of radium in radium therapy may be largely obviated if some system of remote control is adopted by which the radium is only introduced into the container after the latter has been adjusted on the patient. If such arrangements are not available, the importance of expeditious handling cannot be exaggerated.

Rooms used for beam therapy should be so equipped that adjacent rooms in permanent occupation are adequately protected.

51. The following lead thicknesses are required to secure a tolerance dosage rate of 10^{-5} r. per second at various distances from various quantities of radium (element).

Quantity of radium (0·5 mm. Pt. screen).	Thickness of lead to give tolerance dosage rate at the following distances from radium source.				Tolerance distance with no lead.
	50 cm.	1 metre.	2 metres.	5 metres.
gm.	cm.	cm.	cm.	cm.	metres.
1	9·0	6·0	3·0	—	4·5
2	10·5	7·5	4·5	1·0	6·5
5	12·5	9·5	6·5	2·5	10·5
10	14·0	11·0	8·0	4·0	14·5

52. If the protection is provided by materials other than lead, the approximate equivalent thicknesses may be found from the table given in the Appendix.

IX. ELECTRICAL PRECAUTIONS WITH ELECTROMEDICAL APPARATUS.*

The advisability of periodical inspection of electromedical apparatus is strongly recommended.

53. With the exception of diathermy, electromedical treatment is carried out with apparatus using current either at ordinary mains voltages (100–250 volts, e.g. sources of ultra-violet light, radiant heat baths and thermal pads), or at somewhat lower voltages (10–75 volts, e.g. equipment for galvanic, faradic and sinusoidal currents, etc.). In the case of diathermy apparatus (whether medical or surgical) current at ordinary voltages and frequencies is converted into current at high voltages and very high frequencies. The electrical precautions to be observed depend to some extent on the type of apparatus. Mains-fed transformers for supplying energy to sinusoidal circuits, etc., are rendered safer by the insertion of a non-magnetic earthed screen inserted between primary and secondary windings.

54. Apparatus operated at mains voltages should be shielded as far as may be necessary by earthed metal guards. As regards lower-voltage apparatus the current may be derived from the mains through the intermediary of either : (a) step-down double-wound transformers or motor-generator sets, or (b) potentiometers or rheostats. (a) Has the important advantage of giving electrical isolation. If (b) is used, care should be taken that the patient is connected at the earthed or neutral end of the system, and that connecting plugs are of a type which ensures that the polarity cannot be reversed.

* See also the Ministry of Health's publication (Memo. 161 Med.) on " Precautions against Shock from Electromedical Apparatus," p. 323.

55. Diathermy apparatus should preferably be of the type in which the output circuit is electrically isolated from the intermediate low-frequency circuit, and in all cases the low frequency side of the apparatus should be enclosed either in an earthed metal enclosure or in one offering good electrical insulation. Spark gaps should be enclosed and adjustment should be effected by insulated handles or the like.

56. Unless there are reasons to the contrary it is in general advisable to restrict earthing to the electromedical apparatus and to use an insulated support for the patient. A convenient method of earthing is by the use of three-strand cable and three-contact plugs, in which one contact is earthed. Floors should be of an insulating character, and in carrying out treatment in wards with iron bedsteads, care should be taken that the bed does not make contact with heating pipes or the like. Flexible connections used to join up electromedical apparatus to supply mains should be of the type having thick rubber insulation. Braided " flex " should be avoided.

57. A suitable system of power plugs should be adopted to ensure that apparatus cannot be connected to the wrong supply. Plugs of different sizes, properly labelled and bearing distinguishing colours, should be used for the various supplies, e.g. mains voltage A.C., mains voltage D.C., low voltage A.C., low voltage D.C.

X. ULTRA-VIOLET THERAPY.

58. Almost without exception, the sources of ultra-violet rays are fed from the mains. The apparatus should as far as possible be connected permanently to the mains, but if wall plugs are employed they should be combined with quick release enclosed switches. Tests of polarity of a main circuit should not be entrusted to the nursing staff and, in no circumstances, should they be encouraged to handle open wires leading from the main circuit. All such matters including the coupling up to the lamps, should be done by someone with technical knowledge.

59. Open and closed arcs yielding ultra-violet radiation are dangerous to look at with the naked eye; goggles of proved opacity to ultra-violet rays should be used both by patients and by operators. The opacity can only be proved satisfactorily by a spectroscopic test. Goggles which transmit radiation shorter than 3,800 A.U. should not be used. The nursing staff should be warned of the pigmentation produced by repeated or prolonged exposures to ultra-violet radiation.

Thin muslin worn over the face will prevent pigmentation.

60. Practically the only closed arc used is mercury in a quartz tube. The tube gets hot in action and sometimes cracks with the expulsion of hot mercury. It is recommended that these lamps should not be used for overhead work without some device for catching spilt mercury.

61. The open arcs most used are carbon, carbon-cored and tungsten. There is some danger to patients from small white-hot fragments spurted off open arcs on starting.

62. Ventilation is of great importance because all arcs produce deleterious gases; the open arcs also consume oxygen. The air of rooms devoted to such work should therefore be frequently changed yet adequately warmed, for patients exposed to the rays often have little clothing on. Exhaust fans communicating with an outer wall or chimney shaft are recommended for the purpose.

63. Though the dangers of errors in dosage are not so great as with X-rays or radium, every effort should be made to get some measurement of the rays being administered. There is as yet no agreed unit of ultra-violet energy or standard method of measuring doses of these rays. The use of some simple indicator (photo-chemical or photo-electrical) is recommended as a check on the constancy of emission of the source. It is known that the yield of arc lamps increases proportionately with the power supplied to them, so that the volts and amperes in the circuit should be measured as a first check on the yield of radiation. The quartz in mercury vapour lamps gradually becomes more opaque to ultra-violet radiation, and so it becomes more necessary here to supplement the power observations by some device which will measure the radiation actually emitted by the lamp. Further precautions in the use of mercury lamps are necessary because, after these lamps are started, their output gradually decreases, but then increases to a steady value which may take ten to fifteen minutes to attain. Therapeutic work should, therefore, not be begun until this steady state is reached.

XI. GENERAL.

64. The governing bodies of many institutions where radiological and electromedical work is carried on may wish to have further guarantees of the general safety of the conditions under which their personnel work. Although the committee believe that an adequate degree of safety would result if the recommendations now put forward were acted upon, they would point out that this is entirely dependent upon the loyal co-operation of the personnel in following the precautionary measures outlined for their benefit.

65. The Protection Committee further draw attention to the facilities which are provided by the National Physical Laboratory, Teddington, for the inspection of X-ray, radium, electro-medical and ultra-violet light departments, the testing of protective materials and equipment, the calibration of dose-meters and the testing of radium and radioactive substances. In particular, when new departments are being planned, the Committee suggest that it will normally be found specially advantageous to call on the services of the Laboratory prior to or at an early stage in the erection of the department. The Reports of the Laboratory are based on the Recommendations of the Committee, with which it works in close co-operation.

66. The Protection Committee will welcome at any time suggestions or information which would tend to improve the scheme of protection outlined in their Recommendations.

THE CARE AND CUSTODY OF RADIUM *

In organising a hospital radium service regulations are necessary to ensure :—

1. The economic use of radium.
2. The protection of radium workers.
3. The safe custody of radium.

1. THE ECONOMIC USE OF RADIUM

The economic use of radium is greatly facilitated if a system is adopted which records the amount of radium which is " available " at any moment. The radium is considered " available " if it is not in actual use or is not earmarked for a particular patient. It is convenient to have a check system which shows the available radium with the least exposure of the observer to radiation. This may be accomplished by :—

(a) A Radium Register. (See Fig. 1.) This is a book, the pages of which are ruled in columns which bear headings corresponding to the various types of containers in use and which show the total number of each type. These headings correspond to the different containers in the safe. Each patient undergoing radium treatment, or for whom radium is set aside, has his name placed on a line, and the number of each kind of container employed is entered opposite the name in the appropriate column. At the bottom of the page is a diagram of the safe, each drawer or compartment being represented by a square in which the number and type of containers in that drawer are entered. If the page is filled in at a given hour every day a picture of the entire stock and location of the radium is presented. If desired the lay-out shown in Fig. 1 may be divided into two sections which are printed on pages facing each other.

(b) Indicator Boards. (See Fig. 2.) For this procedure indicator and distribution boards and a number of discs of two distinctive colours (e.g. " white " and " red ") are necessary.

Indicator Board No. 1 in the Radium Office.

Indicator Board No. 2 adjoining the radium safe.

Distribution Board in the Radium Office.

(Where the safe is situated close to the Radium Office, one indicator board will suffice.)

The Indicator Boards are divided into squares, each furnished with one or more pegs on which the coloured discs can be hung. Each square represents a drawer in the radium safe.

The Distribution Board is similarly provided with squares and pegs, each square representing a unit in the hospital in which radium may be used.

Each radium container bears an identification number and markings and is represented by two discs engraved with the same number but of different colours. If all the containers are in the safe all the white discs are placed on Indicator Board No. 1 and all the red discs on Indicator Board No. 2. When containers are issued for use the corresponding red discs are transferred to the appropriate squares on the Distribution Board and the corresponding white discs to Indicator Board No. 2. Thus Indicator Board No. 2 always has a full complement of discs, red discs representing radium in the safe and white discs representing radium in use.

A convenient procedure for indicator boards will be found on page 321.

2. THE PROTECTION OF RADIUM WORKERS.

Under this heading consideration has to be given to :—

(a) Protection from radium in the safe.
(b) Protection from radium in transit from one place to another.
(c) Protection from radium in use in the wards.
(d) Protection from radium while it is being " made up."

(a) From Radium in the Safe. (See Fig. 3.) The safe should be so constructed that the radium workers are never exposed to the full radiation of the whole of the radium in the safe. An ordinary fire-proof safe can be used but it must be fitted with a lead interior so arranged as to contain a series of drawers or containers, all of which must provide lead protection between the radium and the front of the safe. A large drawer or compartment is useful for " made up " radium, etc. The safe should afford a minimum protection of 15 cm. (6 inches) of lead in every direction. It is desirable that the radium safe should be kept in a cellar or recess which is not in constant occupation.

(b) From Radium in Transit. All radium should be carried from one part of the hospital to another in containers which should be carried as remote as possible from the person, and which give a minimum filtration of 1 cm. of lead.

(c) From Radium in use in the Wards. Patients undergoing radium treatment should not be segregated so that too many are present in a ward at one time. Every ward in which radium is being employed should contain a lead safe or locker affording not less than 1 cm. of lead protection into which all radium which is temporarily not in use should be at once transferred. All ward nurses should be clearly warned of the danger of staying for any length of time in close proximity to radium.

(d) From Radium while it is being "made up." All radium manipulations such as loading surface appliances and containers should be done on a specially constructed radium bench which affords protection. (See Fig. 4.) Needle holders and a simple microscope of the Kaye and Higgins type * for examining and identifying radium containers, are very useful.

All persons working with radium or in radium departments should have frequent protection measurements made by a physicist by the use of either Sievert condenser chambers or dental films worn on the person. Physical surveys of all places where radium is in use should be made from time to time.

In general the recommendations of the International and British X-ray and Radium Protection Committees should be followed.

3. THE SAFE CUSTODY OF RADIUM.

(a) To Prevent Loss. The key of the radium safe should be in the custody of one person who can only delegate his or her responsibility in specified circumstances. This custodian should be responsible for the actual daily checking of the radium, but should be provided with a rota of assistants who can do such handling of the radium as may be necessary.

Whenever radium is issued from the safe it should be accompanied by a statement in writing giving the number of the containers and the amount of radium in each of them. Each time radium changes hands an acknowledgment in writing should be given for the radium. When radium is being worn by a patient, a particular nurse in the ward should be responsible for its safe custody, and she should remain responsible until some other nurse has acknowledged in writing having taken over its custody. When radium is removed from a patient it should be returned at once either to the ward safe, or to the radium custodian, and again a written acknowledgment must be obtained.

A radium label of a distinctive type should be attached to the bed of each patient wearing radium.

Dressings from a patient wearing radium must not be destroyed until they have been electroscopically tested or until all the radium has been removed from the patient and found correct. Distinctive bins are useful in this connection.

All discharges and excreta of patients being treated by radium should be examined before being thrown away. If a radium container becomes displaced in the course of treatment the responsible surgeon must be informed at once.

Patients under treatment with radium should either not be allowed to leave their beds or only to move about within a circumscribed area.

In the event of a suspected loss of radium the head of the department or his deputy must be immediately told of it.

In case a radium container is missing :—

(i) Immediately inform the Radium Officer of the suspected loss.

(ii) Allow ward fire to die out. Do not disturb ashes, etc.

(iii) Do not sweep floors or disturb furniture, sinks, sluices, etc.

(iv) If an X-ray examination is necessary, see that all the patient's clothing is changed before leaving the ward. Preserve the clothing carefully.

(v) No dressings or laundry must leave the ward, nor dustbins be emptied, until further instructions are received.

(vi) Steps should immediately be taken to damp down hospital incinerator fires, and search should be made in suspected neighbourhoods with a sensitive electroscope or simple form of Geiger counter.

(b) To Prevent Damage. No mercurial solution or iodine should be allowed to come in contact with radium containers.

No plasters containing metallic salts should be used on sites to which radium is being applied or to which it will be applied.

Radium containers should be sterilised by boiling in plain water (without soda). This should not be done over an open sink.

The radium containers should not be held in the fingers but only with special forceps. Rubber gloves should be worn whenever practicable.

Radium containers should only be inserted by means of special forceps or introducers. They must not be held by pressure forceps of the ordinary type.

All damaged radium containers must be withdrawn from service and returned to the National Physical Laboratory without delay. Repairs, whether minor or otherwise, should not be attempted by the Hospital Staff.

4. PROCEDURE CONCERNING THE ISSUING AND RETURN OF RADIUM

When an indicator system is in use, the following procedure will be found convenient :—

(a) Radium should be requisitioned from the custodian on a printed form, signed by a senior member of the staff. One week's notice should, if possible, be given.

(b) Acknowledgment of the request and a statement as to the date and time at which the radium can be obtained should be given by the custodian on a suitable form.

(c) When radium is to be issued from the safe, the white indicator discs corresponding to the radium requisitioned should be taken from the board in the office, and handed to the radium assistant on duty together with the key of the safe.

(d) The radium assistant exchanges the white discs for the corresponding red ones on the second board, removes and checks the appropriate containers, and brings them to the radium office, together with the red discs, which are put on the distribution board.

(e) After a second examination, the radium containers are sent to the ward or theatre, along with the receipt book which is signed by the Sister or her deputy. The Sister should at once place the containers under lock and key in the ward locker until they are required.

(f) Radium containers issued but not used should be collected each afternoon, marked off in the receipt book and returned to the main safe, the indicator and distribution boards being appropriately adjusted.

(g) When treatment is completed the radium containers should be cleaned and sterilised in the department in which they have been used, and returned to the radium custodian, who should issue a receipt, and enter them in the record book.

The containers should then be examined, and damaged containers withdrawn from service, the remainder being returned to the main safe and the indicator and distribution boards suitably adjusted.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SHOCK FROM ELECTRO-MEDICAL APPARATUS.

(Memo. 161 Med. issued by the Ministry of Health.)

THE number of serious accidents from the use of electro-medical apparatus has so far been extremely small, but two factors seem likely to increase the risk of such accidents in the future. First, the ever-growing number of new medical appliances introduced each year, in which current from the main electric supply is utilised; and, secondly, the tendency for hospitals and institutions generally to change from their own direct current supplies of comparatively low voltage to the standard alternating current of 230 volts. Industrial experience * shows that as regards the risk of serious shock, alternating currents are far more dangerous than direct currents.

Careful attention to the following points should go far to minimise the risk of accident :—

1. Old apparatus.—Old and improperly insulated apparatus is in itself a grave source of danger.

2. The electrical treatment of patients in bed.—It is essential that the iron bedstead † should by no possibility be in such a position as to act as a means of "earthing" the patient, that is, it should not be in contact with any earthed metal, e.g., heating or water pipes, radiators, or even an "earthed" wireless receiver. The increasing use of radiant heat baths, resuscitation cradles, thermal pads for eye and ear work, and similar appliances receiving current in direct connection with the main current supply, necessitates increased precaution lest the patient be accidentally "earthed"; patients undergoing treatment should be out of range of accidental contact with "earthed" metal, such as radiators.

Where apparatus of non-earth-free type (i.e., not insulated from mains) is in use, it is undesirable that patients undergoing treatment simultaneously in the same room or ward should be within reach of each other.

It is important to secure that treatment rooms are not so crowded with apparatus that these precautions are impossible.

3. Earthing.—Under conditions which probably obtain in many wards, it may well be that electrical safety is best secured by insulating electrical apparatus instead of adopting the alternative method of earthing it. Thus, in wards where the floor is of wood and there is little likelihood of contact with earthed metal, preference should be given to the use of reading lamps constructed of wood rather than of metal.

In other situations, however, where there are conducting floors or earthed metal, the metal work of electrical apparatus should be earthed, and care taken to ensure the efficiency and maintenance of the earth connections.

In bath rooms or wash rooms the use of any portable apparatus, or apparatus fixed within reach from the bath or basin, should be avoided.

4. Electric pads.—The source of supply for heat treatment by electro-thermal compresses should always be at low voltage. If direct current mains supply is used, a reduction in voltage may be effected by the provision of a motor generator, whilst with alternating current, double-wound transformers, if necessary of a type tapped for regulation, should be interpolated between the source of supply and the patient.

5. Wireless headphones.—In cases where patients wearing headphones may be undergoing electrical treatment, or may handle electrical apparatus, it is desirable that consideration should be given to the insulation of the output circuit to which the headphones are connected, which can be easily effected by a double-wound isolating transformer. This recommendation also provides against the headphone circuits being alive at the pressure applied to the anode of the last amplifying valve of the wireless set.

6. Radiant heat baths.—These should be constructed as follows :—

(1) An internal mesh screen should be fitted to cover and protect the lamps and holders.
(2) The lampholders should be of insulating material, of heat-resisting character.
(3) Metal work should be earthed.

7. Projectors for light treatment.—These possess the common feature of exposure of live conductors within the reflectors, and there is similar exposure with the use of arc lamps. Whilst it is unlikely that live parts would be touched whilst such apparatus is in use, there is some risk to

* On industrial premises thirty fatalities due to shock from alternating currents at between 200 and 250 volts have occurred during the past five years, as compared with one due to direct currents of similar voltages.

† The necessity for these precautions (1 and 2) is illustrated by a recent fatality. A patient, in bed in a hospital ward, was receiving treatment to the leg from a radiant heat bath of the ordinary metal type. In this a metal frame carried metal lamp-holders on metal brackets, and moreover these were fixed in such a way that by long use or accident the fastenings of 7 out of 8 brackets had become loose, causing failure of insulation and rendering the metal case "live." No shock was felt, however, until the patient, sweating from the effect of the treatment, grasped the iron bedstead, which happened to be in contact with a hot-water pipe, and was electrocuted. The current was alternating 50 cycles and 230 volts.

the operator which could be minimised by the provision of mesh guards. In the case of projectors designed for use on industrial premises (bakeries) it has been found possible to incorporate such guards.

Earthing of the metal work of projectors is desirable.

8. Sets for generating electricity (as Galvanic, Faradic and Sinusoidal currents).—These are usually energised from the service mains, and for purposes of electrical safety may be considered to fall into two groups. In the first, a method of construction known as " earth free " is adopted, which, in effect, isolates the circuits with which the patient may be in contact from the main supply circuit. Electric shock at mains pressure would be possible only if a breakdown of insulation between the two systems occurred, and in good class apparatus the design is such that it would appear that there is no great risk of this occurring.

In the second group, however, electrical isolation from the mains supply is not effected. The earlier British-made sets, with some present-day Continental types, come within this category, and it is likely that this type of equipment is in use in a number of clinics. Potentiometer control is often incorporated, and a breakage of the resistance winding might result in the patient being exposed to mains pressure.

In many cases the mains supply to apparatus would be derived by means of a flexible cable and plug connector, and thus although initial care may have been taken that the plug is so inserted as to ensure that the circuit to the patient is at the neutral or earthed end of the potentiometer, a reversal of the plug or of the flexible conductor would mean that the application to the patient would be at mains pressure. If the patient should touch earthed metal under such conditions the consequences may be serious.

It is also desirable that all possible steps should be taken to guard against interruption of the current whilst the patient is under application. Whilst current up to considerable densities may flow without appreciable discomfort, provided efficient contacts are made, the consequences of sudden interruption such as might be caused by a fuse blowing, a bad contact in a plug fitting, or a breakage in a flexible connection would certainly lead to shock, under some conditions, of a severe character.

Other examples of apparatus within this class are cautery burners and cavity lamps connected to sources of main supply through resistance windings. In both cases the effect of open circuiting or of earthing the patient may be serious.

In general, it is considered that the use of sets of the second group, i.e., those which are not isolated electrically from the source of main supply, should be deprecated.

9. Apparatus for diathermy treatment.—These may also be divided into two groups. In the first the patient is subjected to a relatively low voltage high frequency current, and in the second to a minute current supplied at very high pressure and frequency. Whilst in both cases the necessary transformation effects isolation of the patient from the mains, there is an intermediate low frequency circuit operating at pressures ranging from 2,000 to 6,000 volts in which there may be sufficient electrical energy to cause severe electric shock. This intermediate circuit is, in some designs, isolated from the patient's circuit, but it would appear that such electrical separation is not invariably adopted. Where there is no isolation there would be an element of risk to the patient under certain rather remote conditions. In both cases it would be dangerous for the operator to attempt an adjustment or repair of the apparatus whilst live, and it is suggested that a preference should be evinced for designs in which :—

(1) The patient's circuit is electrically isolated from the intermediate (or spark gap) circuit;
(2) The spark gap is mounted inside the cabinet or enclosure containing the apparatus;
(3) The door of the cabinet or enclosure is so interlocked with the source of main supply as to ensure that the latter is disconnected when the door is opened.

10. Systematic inspection.—Regular and systematic inspection by competent experts should be made of all electro-medical apparatus to ensure the maintenance of efficient insulation, so that there is no breakdown through which the voltage of the main supply can reach the metallic body of the apparatus. Insulated wiring usually breaks down at connections (plugs and holders), and these should be specially protected (e.g., by properly fitted spiral springs, etc.). These connections should also be inspected with special care and frequency. Certain manufacturers have organised a maintenance service for electro-medical apparatus in clinics and hospitals.

It is specially advised that the above points should be borne in mind when the purchase of new apparatus is under consideration.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST ANÆSTHETIC EXPLOSIONS IN OPERATING THEATRES.

(Memo. 191 Med. issued by the Ministry of Health, reproduced by the kind permission of the Controller, His Majesty's Stationery Office.)

THE number of serious accidents due to anæsthetic explosions in operating theatres or rooms has, so far, been small, but two main factors seem likely to increase the risk of such accidents. The first is that administration of ether and oxygen mixtures is common, the second lies in the extensive and growing use of electrical apparatus close to the patient during anæsthesia. A study of conditions present at the time of certain accidents in this country known to the Ministry has shown the need for precautionary measures, and while the matter will be the subject of further inquiries it has been thought desirable to issue forthwith the following memorandum prepared in the Ministry, in consultation with the Factory Department of the Home Office, on points to which attention should in the meantime be given.

The Anæsthetic.

1. (a) Ether-air and ether-oxygen.—A rich ether-oxygen mixture is more dangerous than a corresponding ether-air mixture and a very small spark suffices to cause ignition.

(b) Nitrous oxide.—Although this gas is not itself inflammable, mixtures of ether vapour with air or oxygen are made not less, but even more, inflammable if nitrous oxide is added.

(c) Ethyl chloride.—This yields a vapour which forms an explosive mixture with air, and its use is dangerous in proximity to flames or apparatus likely to involve a spark or hot wires.

(d) A.C.E. mixture.—The ordinary A.C.E. mixture may yield an explosive mixture with air and present dangers if used under the conditions mentioned in (c) above.

(e) Ethylene-oxygen.—With this mixture the explosion resulting from ignition is very destructive.

Choice of Anæsthetic.

2. Methods of anæsthesia which are available when explosion risks may be anticipated are :—

Basal narcotics.
Local analgesia.
Nitrous oxide.
Chloroform.

These may be used in their usual combinations and with oxygen. Chloroform is, however, not always advisable and if local anæsthesia is impracticable the risk of ether may be minimised by limiting its administration to the induction of anæsthesia. After an interval sufficient to ensure that all ether vapour has been practically eliminated, the use of electrical apparatus is admissible, anæsthesia being maintained with chloroform or nitrous-oxide-oxygen.

Risk of ether explosion may in general be lessened by the employment of a rigid closed circuit method of administration with carbon di-oxide absorption. Under such conditions with a tightly fitting mask no anæsthetic should escape into the air.

Anæsthetic Apparatus.

3. In some types of apparatus it is possible for an explosive mixture containing ether to be delivered although the valve or tap is set to admit chloroform or nitrous oxide only. This is due to evaporation combined with the slight suction effect of the gas flow and its occurrence is more likely if the ether bottle is surrounded by a hot water jacket. In this type of apparatus, the casual emptying of the ether container is no safeguard but possibly an added danger. The ether bottle should be altogether detached and not replaced until all trace of ether has been removed, or it should be fitted with an effective valve which closes the outlet from the bottle when ether vapour is not required.

It has been established by experiment * that ether-oxygen mixtures can ignite along a tube such as that employed in intratracheal administration or in conjunction with a mask. If ignition occurs at the outlet, therefore, flame may reach the ether bottle causing a burst with ejection of burning ether.

Enclosed suction pumps should be so constructed that the exhaust delivery is outside the motor case; otherwise in nose and throat operations it is possible to suck in the air containing ether until concentration within the explosive limits is reached.

* Morgan, J. D., Proc. Royal Soc. Medicine, Vol. 25, Part I.

Electrical Apparatus.

4. (a) Surgical Diathermy.—Experience has shown that it is unwise to use diathermic apparatus if ether must be administered. The essential feature of this apparatus is the cutting arc or spark at the electrode which is definitely capable of igniting ether-air or ether-oxygen mixtures. The employment of a blanket or other form of screen between the patient's head and the point of application of the electrode is in no sense a reliable safeguard, and further risk of ignition arises from the spark gaps within the cabinet, and from the fact that the patient may be at an electrical potential, with consequent risk of sparking to the operator or other conducting bodies such as the table or anæsthetic apparatus.

(b) X-ray Apparatus.—Careful consideration of the electrical construction and method of connecting X-ray apparatus is essential if its use in the presence of an inflammable anæsthetic is required. Sparking may occur in consequence of a defect in insulation, at switches, regulators, fan cooling motors, or plug and socket connectors, the degree of danger depending on the ventilation and proximity to the patient.

(c) Surgical Lamps.—These instruments must, in general, be of small dimensions, a fact which has led to a form of construction which, comparatively, is not robust and therefore tends to become unreliable with use. Sparking may be caused by accidental short circuiting of exposed terminals, or may occur in consequence of defects such as failure of insulation or intermittent contact and also at switches including those of the regulating type. Such sparking is particularly dangerous in connection with nose and throat operations where anæsthesia is maintained by ether-oxygen.

It is very desirable that those concerned with the design, construction, maintenance, and use of surgical lamps should realise the explosion risk and endeavour to minimise it. The first two points are for the manufacturer, but the best designs may be rendered ineffective unless the maintenance is both careful and competent.

The danger of ignition is less when small low voltage dry cells are used than where other forms of supply, such as accumulators, transformers, motor generators and large dry cells are employed. In general the voltage of the source of supply need not be appreciably more than that for which the lamp bulbs are rated, common values being 2·5, 2·7 and 3·5 volts.

Grave risk of electric shock and sparking is introduced by the arrangement of a surgical lamp, in conjunction with a regulating resistance, for direct connection to public supply mains.

These considerations apply also to lamps intended for attachment to the surgeon's head, and other forms of light projectors, the degree of risk depending on ventilation and the distance from the point of administration (or leakage) of the anæsthetic.

(d) Cauteries.—In addition to the possibility of electrical sparking the heat of the cautery may in itself be sufficient to cause combustion of ether vapour. Ether-oxygen vapour will, under conditions quite compatible with those under which anæsthetists use such a mixture, ignite by contact with hot metal 300°–350° C. below visible red heat.

(e) General Electrical Installation.—This term includes wiring, lighting and heating apparatus with the necessary switches and plug sockets. The risk of anæsthetic ignition such as at a heater element, or in consequence of switch spark, or a defect, is again dependent on the ventilation and situation. Attention to these latter factors should result in material diminution of the danger.

Static Electricity.

5. Under ordinary conditions there is sufficient humidity in the atmosphere of this country to prevent dangerous static electrification, but on days of exceptional dryness, or in theatres to which only warm dry air is delivered by a ventilating plant, the possibility of electrification and consequently of sparking is present. The latter condition is becoming more common and the number of theatres at risk is therefore increasing. Insulated apparatus such as rubber-tyred patients' trolleys or portable anæsthetic equipments can be electrified in various ways, as, for instance, by drawing a dry blanket or towel across them. Such charges usually leak away after a few seconds, but discharge by sparking to the person or adjacent objects is capable of igniting ether-oxygen mixtures.

This source of danger may be eliminated by artificial humidification of the air. Where this course is undesirable it is advisable to earth insulated apparatus, such as rubber-tyred trolleys or operating tables, and in general a light trailing chain between trolley metal-work and floor will usually be effective.

Static electrification is readily discharged by earth connections, even those of comparatively high resistance, and this point is of some importance if it is considered undesirable on account of shock risk to introduce "dead" earthed apparatus into a theatre where current supplied from public mains is used.

Ventilation.

6. The first point for attention when risk of anæsthetic explosion is under consideration is the adequacy, or otherwise, of the ventilation. It may be possible to devise local means of extracting air and vapour from the immediate vicinity of the patient which may considerably diminish general diffusion of anæsthetic vapour in the theatre, a point which, apart from reduction of explosion risk, may be of physical advantage to the surgical staff.

Accidents.

The following brief accounts of accidents of recent occurrence in this country illustrate some of the dangers referred to.

(1) In the course of an operation for dilatation of a cancerous growth of the œsophagus with insertion of radium, and while the surgeon was withdrawing a small surgical lamp, an explosion occurred in the patient's mouth and also at the anæsthetic apparatus which burst into flames. (The patient subsequently died.)

When the surgeon was about to begin the operation the oxygen stream through the ether bottle on the anæsthetic equipment was stopped by means of a tap, the latter being set to deliver chloroform and oxygen only. It was found, however, that a small quantity of ether may have been drawn from the open delivery side of the bottle to join the main current of oxygen and chloroform to the patient.

(2) Whilst a portable anæsthetic equipment carried on a rubber-tyred vehicle was being pushed alongside a similarly tyred patient's trolley, an explosion occurred resulting in injuries to the anæsthetist and patient. The air supply to the anæsthetic room in which the explosion occurred was treated and delivered by a ventilating plant. Its humidity was very low in consequence of this treatment. It was afterwards found that the insulated trolleys could be readily electrified by sharp movements of blankets, etc. The possibility of electrification of the insulated vehicles has since been obviated by the provision of trolley chains which have been found effective on a "Granolithic" or similar floor.

(3) A diathermy operation was in progress for carcinoma of the epiglottis. Anæsthesia was induced by chloroform (intratracheal), but during the course of the operation the anæsthetist thought it desirable to change to ether. An explosion occurred when the diathermy electrode was within the patient's mouth. Some of those present were injured by flying glass, and the patient subsequently died.

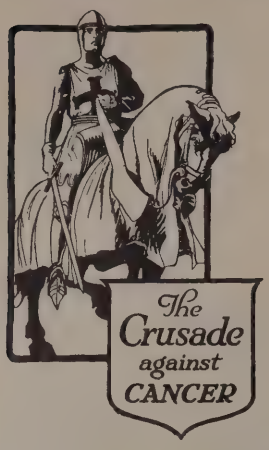
CANCER IS INCREASING



66,354 persons in Great Britain died from Cancer last year—five more a day than the year before—and Cancer increased its hold as the second principal cause of death!

These facts are deplorable in a civilisation which has already succeeded largely in mastering that scourge of human life, tuberculosis. What can be done?

Simply this. The Royal Cancer Hospital has spent thousands of pounds in research and has improved the methods of treatment which restore sufferers to health. Its hopes of finding a remedy are now at their highest. But money must be found at once to continue this work and bring it to the highest pitch of success.

IMPERIAL CANCER RESEARCH FUND

Patron—His Most Gracious Majesty the King.
President—The Rt. Hon. Viscount Halifax, K.G., P.C.

FOUNDED in 1902, under the direction of the Royal College of Physicians of London and the Royal College of Surgeons of England as a centre for research and information on Cancer, the Imperial Cancer Research Fund is working unceasingly on the systematic investigation of the disease in man and animals. The work of this Fund and of other great centres of research has increased our knowledge of the origin and nature of Cancer and has so altered our outlook that the disease is now curable in increasing numbers. But our present accommodation is too limited and we are now building new modern laboratories to extend the scope of our investigations. The income from investments and the Endowment Fund is insufficient to cover the total annual expenditure, and help is urgently needed to meet the heavy additional cost of expansion.

Donations and Subscriptions may be sent to the Honorary Treasurer, 8-11 Queen Square, London, W.C.1, or may be paid to the Westminster Bank, Ltd., Marylebone Branch, 1 Stratford Place, London, W., A/c Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

FORM OF BEQUEST

I hereby bequeath the sum of £ to the Treasurer of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund under the direction of the Royal College of Physicians of London and the Royal College of Surgeons of England, 8–11, Queen Square, Bloomsbury, London, W.C. 1, for the purpose of Scientific Research, and I direct that his receipt shall be a good discharge for such legacy.

THIS Hostel was founded in 1891. Its object is to provide a Home, where men and women in the last stages of illness, who, having seen better days, shrink from claiming the shelter of the County Hospital or Workhouse Infirmary and can appreciate very fully the refinement and comfort which we are able to give them, may end their days in peace carefully and tenderly nursed and surrounded by everything that can cheer them and alleviate their sufferings.

The Home is almost entirely dependent upon charity; it is absolutely free to all without distinction of creed or country.

Application for admission to be made to the Sister Superior, 29 North Side, Clapham Common, S.W. 4.

This splendid surgeon's unstinting devotion to the cause of humanity is only one of the thrilling chapters in the wonderful story of Guy's Hospital, which, in two centuries, has grown from a single building housing 60 in-patients to a great Hospital, covering 12 acres, with more than 11,000 in-patients and 527,000 out-patient attendances in a year. . . THE COST OF CIVILIZATION . .

Since 1930, when a unique combined unit of Isolation Hospital and Research Laboratories was built, Queen Charlotte's Hospital has been at war with the microbe causing puerperal fever. This organism is also responsible for scarlet fever, abscess of the ear and death from wounds both in war and on the roads. It is a costly warfare. Over £80,000 has been spent and success is now within sight.

But lack of funds has meant that money for new maternity wards has been used for this vital research. Though over 2,900 women are admitted to the wards, and 1,200 treated at their homes each year, we are still compelled to turn away one woman in four, so that we must build now.

£50,000 is needed this year for this essential extension, now begun.
